BATTLE OF BUTTLE NEAR CLIMAX

Big Clash Comes Wednesday Before Water Rights Chief

Controversy over the proposed damming of Buttle Lake will come to a head at Courtenay next Wednesday when provincial water rights comptroller E. H. Tredcroft opens hearings on the application of B.C. Power Commission for rights to use the storage facilities of the lake.

The "Battle of Buttle" has focussed the public spotlight, as it has not been for years, on important questions which B.C. will face repeatedly as its industrial and economic growth continues at the present rate and the demand for power increases.

What is the value of electric power as balanced against glorious natural scenery and outdoor growth, with its lure to tourists and recreational advantages for British Columbians?

In developing one, what steps can best be taken to protect the other?

The proposed damming of Buttle Lake would raise the water level about 35 feet, flood 1,600 acres of shoreland in a strip some 25 feet wide around the edge except in low-lying parts and creek mouths.

Will this ruin the lake? If it will, isn't there some other way to create the power? Is Vancouver Island running near the end of its hydro-electric resources?

Expert witnesses will be called at both Courtenay and at later hearings in Victoria to testify on all phases of these questions.

Because of the intense interest in the Buttle Lake problem, the Victoria Daily Times present summaries of the views of two well-known B.C. writers.

Lloyd Turner, who takes the power argument, is the business editor of The Vancouver Sun and a leading writer on industrial affairs.

For

By LLOYD TURNER

Engineers warn that the industrial life of Vancouver Island could be at stake in the power vs. beauty fight at Buttle Lake.

Power developed economically is the key to expansion and it is claimed the whole of Vancouver Island, including the Greater Victoria district, will be feeling pangs of hunger for power in the next decade unless every potential is developed.

The B.C. Power Commission's John Hart development at Campbell River holds much of the future for the Island in the additional generators it can set up to produce cheap electrical energy.

Already the commission can see the bottom of the barrel. The predicted power demand on the present Hart development will go beyond the capacity of the installation by 1954.

The plan is to install two more generators, each with a 28,000 horsepower capacity to give the service needed.

To turn the new turbines will require harnessing of more of the Campbell River water system.

Top B.C. engineers say the most practical and economical step in the expansion is the utilization of Buttle Lake as a reservoir.

Buttle Lake is a near-inaccessible area of unsurpassed native beauty—no one will disagree on that.

But it here, say the engineers, that a dam should be built to utilize the full potential of the Campbell River water system.

They tell us the valley of Upper Campbell Lake is wide and the bottom is full of glacial drift which offers poor foundation for a dam to hold back water to a depth of 68 feet.

There is no such problem at Buttle.

Buttle wins again in the question of costs. Engineers say the Upper Campbell project would be much more costly — something like $200,000,00 more.

In addition, the Upper Campbell dam would mean the flooding of a highway and a rail line, while the Buttle dam would bring a modern road into the area and for the first time the general public would be able to drive to this semi-isolated area.

Even if Buttle water level was raised, the scenery still would be there and everyone—even those who don't own airplanes—would be able to enjoy the beauty spot.

Against

By RODERICK HAIG BROWN

The one definite thing about the Buttle Lake controversy is that if the power people have their way, something will be done which can NEVER be undone. . . .

Let there be no mistake about it! If the level of Buttle is raised, the 825 square miles of Strathcona Park will have lost its value as parkland forever.

And those who have to make the decision should remember it is in their scope to do a service now for their children, their grandchildren and their great grandchildren.

Strathcona Park is the last remaining area of our west that has hardly been tampered with by man. It is, for the most part, an area of high mountains and deep valleys — a well-timbered protective covering for the all-important headwaters of Vancouver Island's biggest watershed.

But it is in every way ideally suited for park purposes.

Strathcona Park is owned by you and me. It is ours now. It was set aside for our use and enjoyment by a wise government. Don't let anyone take it away.

They say Buttle might just as well be flooded because it is difficult to reach. How wrong they are. All that is required to open the beauty spot is the spending of a few thousand dollars reopening an old trail leading from Upper Campbell to the north end of Buttle.

Once at the lake, the water provides the means of transportation to all of the sylvan and untouched glories of the shore parkland.

The Power Commission has a mandate to secure water power cheaply. It is a one-track mind which is working in the case of Buttle, though. No consideration is being given, apparently, to what the despoilation may cost in terms of other assets.

It may be easier to dam Buttle than Upper Campbell, but I disagree with those who say the Buttle project would be the cheapest.

I estimate Strathcona Park is an asset to the nation worth at least $37,500,000. I get that estimate from the value placed by the State of Montana on famous Glacier National Park.

Glacier brought $15,000,000 to the state from visitors in 1949 and it is worth at least $375,000,000 to Montana alone—perhaps as much again to the whole country.

Experts To Testify Dam Unnecessary

By STUART KEATE
Publisher, Victoria Daily Times

BUTTLE LAKE, B.C.—Expert engineers and geologists will testify at the forthcoming "Power versus Glory" hearings that it is not necessary—or even wise—to dam Buttle Lake.

Their preliminary reports, written after a recent on-the-spot survey, have been made available to the conservationists and more than 20 fish and game and tourist organizations which are mustering forces to preserve this incredibly beautiful lake, gateway to the publicly-owned Strathcona Park.

Three sites are presently being considered:

Sea Mishaps Kill Two; One Craft Sunk

Four Ships Damaged Along Pacific Coast

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—Marine mishaps that plagued the Pacific coast today brought death to at least two persons.

At least one small craft was sunk, four more damaged, and another may have sunk in a series of accidents from British Columbia to Mexico.

In addition, Seattle Coast Guard reported it had received a distress call from an unidentified vessel in southeastern Alaskan waters early today. The vessel reported it was seven miles off the Coronados islands.

Los Angeles Coast Guard reported the fishing vessel Sea Wolf, sank five miles off the South Coronados Islands, off the Mexican coast about 50 miles south of the United States border.

It was possible that due to freak atmospheric conditions, this might be the report of the sinking picked up at Seattle.

Two ship collisions in British Columbia and Washington waters claimed two lives, heavily damaged a tanker and freighter and sent a tug to the bottom.

One man was killed when the tanker Tullahoma and the freighter P. & T. Adventurer collided off the northwest tip of Washington state. Both vessels were severely damaged but neither was reported in a sinking condition.

Another man was missing after the collision of two tugs in bad weather off the British Columbia coast.

The 97-foot Andrew Foss tug went down after the collision with the tug MacLoufay. Eight members of the nine man crew were saved and taken aboard the MacLoufay.

Red Troops Offer Tough Resistance

The Eighth Army said the action was west of Yonchon.

On the central front U.N. forces repulsed an enemy attack that began last night. Across the rest of the peninsula only patrol activity was reported.

MAIN WINS FIRST MATCH

MONTREAL (CP)—Lorne Main of Vancouver gave Canada a one-match lead over Cuba in the Davis Cup tie tennis play today, defeating Jose (Pepe) Aguero in three straigth sets, 6-4, 6-0, 7-5.

CANADIANS TO STAY IN KOREA

SASKATOON (CP)—There is little chance that Canadian troops fighting in Korea can be brought home immediately if a cease-fire is attained, Prime Minister St. Laurent said last night.

"We are going to carry out to the full our moral commitment to the United Nations," he said. "The troops in Korea are U.N. troops and they will stay there until their commanders are ready to release them."

Man Drowned As B.C. Dam Hit By Flood

GOLDBRIDGE, B.C. (CP)—A belated report reaching here today said one man drowned and another was rescued when the control tower of the B.C. Electric LaJoie storage dam was carried away Thursday in a sudden flood.

Albion Norman was drowned.

Residents fear for the safety of the dam itself after Thursday's flash flood. Should the dam collapse, much of the Bridge River Valley would be flooded under the accumulation of water stored for generators at Shalalth on Seton Lake across Mission Mountain.

Eyewitnesses said the cement control works were smashed by the force of the water and that the section of the cement tower remaining is badly cracked.

Famous U.S. Scientist Takes Life

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Faced with prosecution for mishandling funds, a famed University of Michigan scientist killed himself Friday with a lethal dose of snake venom and morphine.

Only three hours before his suicide, university officials told scholarly Dr. Malcolm H. Soule, a renowned bacteriologist, they had turned down his resignation, that he was being fired and would be prosecuted.

Dr. Soule went into the basement of his fashionable home, administered a hypodermic dose of the tropical venom into his viens and fell paralyzed to the floor. He was dead within half an hour.

Prosecutor Douglas K. Reading said today his office was "through with the case unless anything further is turned up by the university." He said a scheduled conference on the 54-year-old bacteriologist's handling of his department funds would probably not be held.

R.A.F. Bomber Completes Trip

MANBY, Eng. (AP)—A four-engine R.A.F. bomber touched down here today, completing a 4,128-mile polar flight from Fairbanks, Alaska, in 19 hours, 34 minutes.

The plane carried a crew of 10, all chosen from the R.A.F. flying college here, and a British newspaper man.

The bomber had flown to Alaska by way of Iceland last week. Its return was delayed by engine trouble and spare parts had to be flown to Fairbanks for the flight back home.

Ridgway Holds Lengthy Parley; Speculation Rife

Utmost Secrecy Marks Conference

TOKYO (Sunday) (AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway left his headquarters office early today after an unusual, six-hour closely-guarded conference with his top aides. Chinese interpreters were present.

The conference, ending at 3 a.m. (Saturday), followed an unusual and oddly-sourced headquarters statement that the Allies want a cease-fire buffer zone in Korea somewhere between the Manchurian border and present battle lines.

Utmost secrecy veiled the meeting.

Among those in session with the Allied supreme commander were his chief of staff, Lt.-Gen. Doyle Hickey, and Brig.-Gen. Edwin K. Wright, chief of the headquarters operations section.

Several hours after he arrived at his office, three jeeps pulled up in front of the Dai Ichi building. They contained service personnel from the headquarters interpretation and translation section.

There was no indication what the conference was about.

(A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Tokyo said it was reported that Ridgway was preparing an important announcement which might herald a breakdown of the Kaesong cease-fire talks.)

It had been in progress for more than five hours at the time the interpreters arrived.

Queen Spends 51st Birthday With Family

The boy, Prince Charles, now four, was speaking to Queen Elizabeth, 51 today.

Shower Brings Hope Of Break In Dry Spell

Farmers Pray For End Of Record 52-Day Drought

Hundreds of hopeful southern Vancouver Island farmers turned their faces to the sky today as a light drizzle threatened to break one of the longest droughts in the history of the coastal region. The shower was strictly localized and did not reach most parts of the Saanich peninsula.

Overcast skies and cooler temperatures contributed to the heartfelt optimism that the dry days were temporarily at an end but from his high observation point on Gonzales Hill, weatherman William Mackie shook his head.

CLEAR TONIGHT

The official report at noon was that the brief break in the long spell of sunshine would be of short duration. Clouds over the city were merely the "southern fringe" of a disturbance which had brought some rain to Estevan Point on the West Coast and Port Hardy, at the northeastern tip of the island.

Mr. Mackie's forecast prophesied possible light showers this afternoon and clearing in the evenings, with southwest winds at 20 to 25 miles, decreasing to 15 miles on Sunday. High temperature for the day will be 68, the overnight low, 53. Today's "trace" of rain fell from 12.10 to 12.20 p.m.

Today's rain did, however, break the 52-day dry spell in the Greater Victoria area (the record will continue in coastal areas which were not affected by today's weather break.) The last rain here fell on July 6, but the amount, .006 inches, was not "measurable" by observatory standards.

LAST HEAVY RAIN MAY 24

The last rain of any duration and volume fell on May 24, and prior to that date, March 31.

SEEMED LIKE THUNDER

Contributing to the happy reception given today's shower was the sound of navy guns, firing a salute to Queen Elizabeth on her 51st birthday. Many Victorians took the sound to be the harbinger of an electric storm which would bring a downpour.

Evidence that the long drought has contributed to an accumulation of household and garden rubbish was seen as every fire department in the area was deluged with requests for burning permits minutes after the rain had begun to fall. Officials said today that no permits will be issued until "two or three good rains" have eliminated all danger.

1ST WORLD WAR ANNIVERSARY

NEW YORK (CP) — The First World War broke out 37 years ago today but the anniversary was scarcely noticed in world capitals, occupied with the Korean conflict and the cold war between the Soviet Union and the West.

On Aug. 4, 1914, Britain declared war on Germany after German troops crossed the Belgian border in violation of a treaty guaranteed by Britain.

Five Perish When Colorado River Floods

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP)—Flood waters smashed hard today at northern Colorado in the wake of torrential rains. Five persons were reported to have perished.

A cloudburst last night flung a six-foot wall of water down the big Thompson River.

Householders and motorists had to abandon homes and automobiles in a scramble for high ground. Some even took to trees until the floods subsided.

Four members of a family named Johnson—father, mother and two daughters aged 14 and 15—were reported to have been drowned when flood waters swept over their resort.

New Oil Talk Delegation From U.K. Lands In Iran

A few hours before the party arrived, Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh told his Senate he would resign rather than sign any agreement with Britain which was "not to Iran's advantage."

But hopes were high that a constructive conference would be held.

Mossadegh outlined terms of Friday's agreement to resume talks — disclosing he apparently has dropped Iran's old iron-clad insistence on carrying her drastic oil-nationalization law out to the letter.

Mossadegh said Britain has accepted Iran's nationalization law of last March, which ordered the take-over from the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company in general language. Then he said Iran has agreed to discuss the carrying out of nationalization "on those parts which deal with the interests of Britain."

This is a big concession by Mossadegh. In the past, he had claimed he could not back up from the second nine-point nationalization law passed in May without causing widespread protest by the Iranian people. This law provided for stripping the British of oil profits, management, and installations — including the world's biggest refinery at Abadan.

WHO IS VICTORIA'S MYSTERY MAN?

Is he tall, short, fat, thin, bald, or curly?

Is he the man wearing overalls next to you on the bus? Or could he be a successful-looking man in a snappy business suit?

There will be $150 in prizes for the person who finds him on downtown streets next week.

ONE WOMAN'S DAY

By NANCY HODGES

CARS AND DRIVERS

THE RECENT series of terrible accidents in and around Victoria has served again to focus the limelight on the potential danger of the motor car, especially when it is in the hands of irresponsible or careless drivers. And I say that without reservations, for it must be patent even to the most casual observer that, despite traffic being as heavy as it is during the working days, the overwhelming majority of the serious—and fatal—accidents occur on Saturday nights and Sundays or during the very early morning hours when few people—or cars—are abroad. From which one can only draw one's own conclusions—and I know what mine are!

POKE OR PRESTO!

APROPOS of that, I see that steps are being taken by the authorities to tell the slow driver to "step on it," on the ground that it is the slow-poke who causes many of the accidents by holding up traffic and causing those behind to pass, when it isn't always safe to pass.

While I am not denying that there may be something in it, the fact remains that it is the driver who takes chances and speeds on curves and when there isn't a clear road ahead, or who mixes alcohol with his gasoline, who causes most of the casualties which mar our road record. And I still feel that there should be a place on our roads for the driver who wants to see something of the scenery as well as for the one who is everlastingly in a hurry to get somewhere—and very often doesn't know where.

CATER TO SPEED

IT IS all part of the tendency to cater to speed. I saw another demonstration of that trend this week, while on one of my rare visits to the movies. The news reel showed a new model just put out by one of the foremost manufacturers of automobiles. This particular car, by the way, was full of super-duper gadgets, such as a top which came up automatically at the first drop of rain.

But what struck me the most was the accent laid on its potential power. Although designed for ordinary, private use, it was guaranteed to attain a speed almost comparable with a racing model, and to accelerate with an ease which could be envied by the young man on the flying trapeze.

GOVERNED BY GOVERNORS

WHAT I cannot understand is why manufacturers should continually be striving to heighten the speed potential of passenger cars. Goodness knows, the ordinary car can attain enough speed to satisfy any but the speed maniac—and even they seem to be able to extract the last ounce of horsepower out of the engine in their dizzy dashes towards destruction, judging by the toll of accidents.

And this seeming mania for manufacturing higher-powered cars comes just at a time when—locally, at least—it is being suggested that all "drive-yourself" cars should be fitted with governors, designed to keep the speed down to a maximum of 45 miles an hour. It's a pity the makers and the U-drive companies couldn't get together on the matter.

DISCIPLINE FOR DRIVERS

WHILE inventing "governors" for inanimate things isn't it a pity that someone cannot invent a "governor" to control the human being who governs the destiny of the car he is driving—to say nothing of the destiny of his passengers and the passersby—with a reckless responsibility and disregard of the rights of others on the road?

In the meantime, until such drivers learn to discipline themselves, it might be well if the penalties for careless driving—and all the other infractions of the law for which that term is becoming synonymous—were severely stiffened. And for the protection of the innocent, for the sake of the police as well as for the alleged offender, isn't it about time that Victoria got that "drunkometer" or some other scientific test for those who allegedly mix alcohol with their gasoline?

Comedians Sued For $2,000,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Being comedians, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis may be able to laugh at this, but—

Screen Associates Incorporated has sued them for $2,000,000 damages, alleging they broke a contract under which they agreed to make seven movies.

Also named as a defendant was Hal Wallis, film producer with whom the comics are alleged to have contracted to make seven pictures, and York Pictures Company.

Independent Engineer To Testify At Hearing

(2) At the outlet of Buttle Lake;

(3) On Campbell River, 2½ miles below its egress from Upper Campbell Lake.

The reports of engineers and geologists make clear that there are "grave uncertainties" about the holding power of the dam projected for Buttle Lake, which the B.C. Power Commission insists is the best available.

Summarizing the three proposed sites, one geologist concludes:

(1) Upper Campbell has little to recommend it.

(2) There are distinct indications of leakage and seepage potentials at the Buttle site.

(3) The Campbell River site "offers good possibilities for an efficient, safe and permanent dam. . . . This location warrants careful investigation before any site is permanently selected."

"The initial cost would be higher but maintenance less," he adds. "It will be more efficient, more permanent and more dependable. It will not damage the park."

* * *

This week I went over the disputed area by air, by boat, and on foot.

One of the greatest arguments in favor of preservation of Buttle and the "people's park" is the appalling devastation wrought by logging operations, by fire, and by the Hart hydro-electric project on the Lower Campbell Lake.

It's reported that American tourists come to Forbes, take one look at the grim view confronting them, and refuse to pick up the reservations they have made weeks in advance.

The power commission says it is doing all in its power to clear the drowned timber. It would appear to be fighting a losing battle. A tug works all day to clear a river arm, providing passage to the lake; by next morning, it is clogged again.

So concerned is the commission about the public outcry that one of the members, General W. W. Foster, went to Forbes Landing recently and pleaded for time in the clearing job. Mrs. Forbes' public criticism has had widespread repercussions.

It is understood that Mrs. Forbes agreed to "lay off" for a period of five days.

* * *

Man-behind-the-scenes in the conservationists' fight is Will J. Reid, a wealthy, white-haired Californian who — ironically enough — is a look-alike for former Premier John Hart, father of the up-island hydro plan.

Reid has been honored by the governments of Alberta and Saskatchewan for his conservation work with Ducks Unlimited (he is currently California chairman of that body). But, he adds with a grin, "I seem to be a fiend in British Columbia."

Reid has been the victim of a whispering campaign since he took up the Buttle Lake fight. Opponents say his only interest is in protecting his "personal estate" on the lake.

His "estate" actually consists of four log cabins and a boathouse, all hand-hewn by a native. Most of the articles in them, including a couple of tin bath-tubs, were brought in by pack-horse, over the trail which logging companies slashed and ruined.

Reid has a two-generation Canadian background. His parents were born on a farm near Kemptville, Ont. He went to public school in Edmonton and the University of Alberta. He was bounced from the latter institution in 1910 for betting the expense money of the U. of A. hockey team on a game with a semi-pro team from Lloydminster. (Alberta won, but Reid lost).

Of the present squabble, he says:

"My family and I have had 18 wonderful years at Buttle.

"If they run me out of here tomorrow, I've had my money's worth. I'm grateful for the life we've had on Vancouver Island. Now I figure I owe something."

Meanwhile, sportsmen in the Comox-Courtenay-Campbell River area express concern on the following aspects of the Aug. 8 hearings:

(1) Will water comptroller E. H. Tredcroft, who is to conduct the hearing, make an up-to-date inspection of the area before the briefs are presented?

Sportsmen feel that this is essential for anyone sitting in judgment on such a vital issue.

(2) Will provincial parks administrator E. G. Oldham be permitted to present a brief?

(3) Will Don Robinson, the island game authority, be heard at the inquiry?

(4) Will the report of government biologists Bob McMinn and Ed Vernon, who took soundings and studied spawning grounds at Buttle recently, be admitted?

Unless all the facts are brought out, and the testimony of these experts examined, the "Save Buttle Lake" faction contend that next week's hearing will be without meaning, and a violation of the interests of the people of the province.

Lawrence Tierney Draws Jail Term

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actor Lawrence Tierney, 35, Friday was sentenced to five days in jail for contempt of court.

Judge Joseph Call ordered the movie tough guy jailed because Tierney appeared in court several hours late for trial on a battery charge.

A bench warrant had been issued for his arrest.

"Sorry I was late, Tierney said, "but my car battery went dead and I got a traffic ticket on my way down here."

"You've been treating this as a joke," said the judge, "but you're not going to be tried when you feel good and ready; you're going to be tried on the date set by the court."

Tierney's trial on the battery charge was re-set for Aug. 13. He was ordered to post bail of $2,500 when he ends his five-day term.

Tierney is accused of striking John Naylor, 25, June 21. Naylor identified Tierney as one of two men who beat him when he investigated noises around his home at 5.30 a.m. Tierney pleaded guilty and asked for a jury trial.

VICTORIA'S SUNSHINE TO DATE, 1951—1,754.9 HOURS

SYNOPSIS: This is the fifty-second day without measurable precipitation at Vancouver Airport and still no indication of any immediate relief in the current dry spell. A quarter of an inch of rain fell over the northern coast and on the north and west coast of Vancouver Island as the leading edge of a moist Pacific air mass pushed slowly into those areas Friday evening and during the night. Some cloudiness will drift into the Lower Mainland during the day but the disturbance appears to have weakened to the point where an appreciable precipitation is likely to follow.

A few showers will occur in the Central Interior, while the Southern Interior valleys remain sunny and warm.

REGIONAL FORECASTS VALID UNTIL MIDNIGHT SUNDAY

VICTORIA: Clear during the morning with a few clouds during the afternoon. Clearing by evening. Clear Sunday. Little change in temperature. Winds southwest 20. Low tonight and high Sunday, 53 and 68.

VANCOUVER AND GEORGIA STRAIT: A few clouds during the day, clearing toward evening. Clear Sunday except brief cloudiness shortly after daybreak. Little change in temperature. Winds light. Low tonight and high Sunday at Vancouver Airport, 52 and 72; Abbotsford Airport, 46 and 76; Nanaimo, 52 and 72.

WEST COAST: Cloudy today and Sunday. Intermittent light rain or drizzle this morning. Fog patches and low cloud along the shorelines Sunday morning. Little change in temperature. Winds light. Low tonight and high Sunday at Estevan, 53 and 63.

Savage Fighting Breaks Out Near Burma Border

Newspaper Reports Clashes Between Nationalist And Red Chinese Forces

RANGOON, Burma (AP)—A report from Mandalay today said savage fighting is going on near the border of Burma and Red China between Nationalist and Communist Chinese forces.

The report published in the independent Burmese newspaper Bahosi broke the silence on the Chinese Nationalist force that penetrated Red-ruled Yunnan province some time ago from its Burma refugee base.

When the penetration of Yunnan by 15,000 Nationalists first was reported 10 days ago, Burmese authorities indicated they had been prodded on their way by the Burma army and said the Burmese were ordered to prevent their return to Burma.

The Mandalay report said two Americans and some Japanese from a secret base in Thailand are directing the Nationalist operation and supplying arms and ammunition. There was no confirmation of this.

(Reuters News Agency said it was reported that Burmese government forces are also engaged in the battle.)

Burma, once in the British Empire, became an independent union in 1948 and now has a socialist-dominated government led by Thakin Nu.

Must Apply For Revision

War veterans with disability pensions of at least 45 per cent, if married, and 35 per cent, if single, who are unemployed or not able to be employed, should arrange now to get an upward revision of their pension rates, S. K. Okell, D.V.A. assistant district administrator, advised today.

An order-in-council was passed by the federal government recently to authorize the "unemployability supplement" to pensions. The pensionable disability must be considered to be a factor contributing to the condition of unemployability.

In cases held to be eligible, the amounts paid will be $40 a month for the married pensioner and $20 for the single person. The amount will not be reduced because of other income or assets. Those who apply prior to the end of this month and are found to be eligible, and were considered eligible as of June 1 this year, will receive the increases back to that date, Mr. Okell said.

Mr. Okell said prospective applicants at up-island points should make inquiries either to the Victoria office or their nearest veterans' officer, giving regimental number, full name and address.

Application forms will be forwarded in duplicate direct to those who appear to be eligible. Both copies should be returned as promptly as possible. In any event, a reply will be sent to all applicants.

Local applications should be made, as far as possible, in person, to Room 602 Belmont Building.

Feel Province Should Help

Provincial government grounds rather than Beacon Hill Park would provide the ideal setting for the famous Royal Roads' conservatory, according to Ald. Frank Mulliner.

He said today a Victoria merchant made the proposal and he was in agreement.

"Far more people would see it on the legislative grounds than at the park," according to Ald. Mulliner.

He felt the estimated maintenance cost in the neighborhood of $16,000 and dismantling charge of a reported $8,000, could be better borne by the province than the city of Victoria.

An unofficial offer of the conservatory, now the property of the Department of National Defense, has been made to the city. City Council agreed to obtain all terms of the offer before making a decision.

India Claims Pakistan In Frenzy Over Kashmir

NEW DELHI (AP)—The Indian government issued a white paper today asserting Pakistan is whipping up a frenzy over Kashmir so "it can fish in troubled waters."

The document repeated Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's claim that India moved troops toward the Pakistan border recently as a defensive safety measure.

The foreign ministry said Nehru has replied to the latest message sent here Thursday by Premier Liaquat Ali Khan of Pakistan.

Liaquat Ali again proposed Nehru come to Pakistan for peace talks and suggested both countries pull back troops from border areas. The contents of Nehru's reply will not be released until tomorrow, a foreign ministry spokesman said.

The two countries fought a war in 1947-48 over the princely state of Kashmir and still have troops there along a cease-fire line. The United Nations sponsored a truce and now has mediator Frank Graham on the spot trying for a peaceful settlement.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Indonesia has proposed a meeting of government leaders of Pakistan, India, Burma and Indonesia in Rangoon for next week to discuss "issues of common interest" — including the Kashmir dispute.

U.S.-Greek Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Greece have signed a treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation. The pact, signed Friday in Athens, provides for travel and residence of citizens of either country in the other, protection of basic personal freedoms.

BULLETIN No. 9
CIVIL DEFENCE
LEARN—AND LIVE
RESCUE
After enemy attacks many lives will be endangered if well-meaning but uninformed people attempt to get friends and relatives out of wrecked buildings. It is therefore essential that everyone has an elementary knowledge of organized rescue work, enabling him to give intelligent assistance to fire, ambulance and police services, or to start rescue work independently if necessary.
Systematic Search Important—
Rescuers should approach damaged areas swiftly but without panic. One group should immediately seek accessible casualties who should be treated and removed depending on the seriousness of their injuries.
A second group should search for trapped casualties, calling out at intervals and listening for cries from the injured. Many lives have been saved by these calling and listening periods. Rescue workers must systematically search all possible sections of buildings where injured could be trapped and still living. The searching must continue until all living casualties are located. Speed and thoroughness are the main essentials.
Where to look for casualties—
Surface casualties will usually be found on the fringes of the incident. More serious casualties in conscious, unconscious and shock stages, possibly cut and bleeding and choked by dust, are usually found inside damaged buildings. These injured may be found near fireplaces, under cupboards and stairs, in basements and in voids under floors.
Danger to Rescuers—
Never cut or remove any supports in wrecked buildings until assured that no further injury will result. Remain constantly alert to the danger of gas poisoning and explosion from broken mains.
KEEP CALM . . . DON'T SMOKE . . . DON'T USE NAKED LIGHTS
Watch for another bulletin next week.

Still Going Up

ANYBODY WHO STILL THINKS that the Canadian government has overdone deflation should take another look at the latest cost of living figure. Despite all the government's efforts to close the inflationary gap between money and goods, prices rose in June more than in May. The June rise of 3.5 points is serious enough. The accelerated pace of inflation since the first of the year is still more alarming.

Clearly the government's calculations of last spring were wrong. At that time, it can be said with certain knowledge, the government believed that prices would rise no more, at least until the full impact of the rearmament program was felt toward the end of the year.

The experts were counting then not so much on the deflation policy, which began with a tightening of bank credit and higher rates in February, but on the leveling off of the United States wholesale price index. The United States gained a definite breathing spell in inflation when the panic buying of last year tapered off at the first of 1951. That pause was expected to reflect itself in Canadian prices long before now. Instead, prices have risen.

The rise was particularly unexpected since the wholesale price index has been stationary for some months. Normally, wholesale price changes are soon reflected in retail prices, but so far this summer this has not occurred, contrary to the government's expectations.

Meanwhile new inflationary factors have entered the economy through many wage increases which presently must show their effect in prices. But the major danger against which President Truman has been warning Congress lies some months ahead when armaments take a larger bite into the supply of civilian goods. The United States approaches this new crisis at least with its retail prices stable at the moment. Canada approaches it with prices still rising.

If the government's calculations have turned out all wrong, at least its methods of attacking inflation are sound, but obviously not strong enough. Even the very cautious policy enforced during recent months has brought strong protest, from sectors of business, which seemed to think the government was determined to produce a depression, and from the Conservative party, which believes the government is over-taxing the people.

Now it is perfectly clear that the deflationary monetary policy, the curbs on credit, should be strengthened, the continual increase in the money supply arrested. And since it is a useful deflationary weapon, the government should try to maintain a large budgetary surplus, despite its political unpopularity in the hands of an irresponsible opposition.

Finally all governments, federal, provincial and municipal, should at last see the necessity of reducing their civilian expenditures, especially on capital works, which bid against the consumer for supplies and help to drive up prices. Of this economy, especially in British Columbia, there is no sign.

The price prospect may not be as bad, in the immediate future, as it looks at the moment. So long as the wholesale price index remains stable it should soon show its results on the retail level. Moreover, there are indications that in some sectors of business, especially in semi-durable goods, the deflation policy is having some of the desired results. It is significant that the largest jump in the June price index was food, not manufactured goods.

On the whole it cannot be said that the government has yet made its policy work. It should enforce that policy much more vigorously before it is forced by political pressures into unworkable measures.

Darkness At Noon

A SURVEY BY THE ASSOCIATED Press shows that in a large part of the world all news is under government censorship of one sort or another. Most of the world's peoples cannot get the simplest facts about their own affairs or the affairs of their neighbors.

The list of countries living under a black-out of information is long. It includes Russia, China, Rumania, Bulgaria and Albania, which, says the A.P., are "virtually sealed off from the western world." A little news is allowed to leak out of Hungary and Poland. In Czechoslovakia, once a free democracy, the A.P. correspondent, William Oatis, is in jail as a spy and is replaced by a Czech citizen who is "virtually limited to the relaying of official press and radio announcements" or government propaganda.

Outside the iron curtain, censorship is enforced in Spain, Indo-China, Egypt, Jordan, Venezuela and Colombia. While there is no direct censorship in Argentina, the Perons have made sure that nothing unpleasant will be published by seizing La Presna and attempting to make all other papers their stooges.

The dictators, large and small, all fear the light. They know that they could not long survive in a world of free discussion. Unhappily there has never been such a world up to now. Always there have been countries where that facts were suppressed and frequently it was those countries that launched great wars. Peoples who are given the facts every day seldom can be led into such adventures.

It may be said, indeed, that the present world crisis could be solved almost overnight if facts could move across all international boundaries, if the Russian people had the remotest knowledge of western nations. And until the facts can move we may be able to prevent war by arming ourselves but we cannot remove one basic cause of war, which is ignorance, the dictator's essential weapon.

We Are Warming Up

THE OLD-TIMERS OF VICTORIA who tell us that the climate used to be colder than it is now probably are right. The recent studies of scientists all over the world indicate that the northern hemisphere is definitely warming up. They cite such interesting facts as these:

Sub-zero temperatures occur only half as frequently in the northern cities of the United States as they did seventy-five years ago. Cod is being caught in the Arctic by Eskimos who had never heard of it before this century. In Greenland the ice is melting away to expose the remains of a civilization long frozen and buried. The mean temperature of Spitsbergen has risen by four degrees since 1912. In Iceland and the higher elevations of Norway barley is now grown on land which formerly was frozen for seven months of the year. The glaciers are shrinking and some of the smaller ones have disappeared altogether. And it is just about a hundred years since Governor Douglas built a road from Burrard Inlet to the Fraser so that he could reach New Westminster by sleigh when the river mouth was frozen over.

The scientists of America and Europe seem to agree that winters are milder than they used to be but they cannot explain the reason. Many theories are advanced—a difference in solar radiation, changes in the ocean currents, some variation in the earth's orbit—but none of them has been confirmed.

All we know yet is that the ice moved down across the northern hemisphere several times before, covering most of what is now Canada, and again retreated. Another retreat may now be under way and perhaps, long hence, there may be yet another advance, which would create for our descendants problems even more serious than the atomic bomb.

Within the great climatic cycle now apparently in reverse there are many minor and temporary cycles. Victoria, for example, has lately experienced some winters like those that the old-timers remember. Despite these interruptions, our northern half of the world is easier to live in than it used to be. One of these days oranges, grapefruit and pineapples may grow in Saanich and in Beacon Hill Park there will be signs warning visitors not to pick the orchids.

Chips Off The Old Brock

By DAVID BROCK

TODAY is the birthday of the Queen . . . God bless her. Since I do not know if it is discourteous to mention a Queen's age . . . or any lady's age . . . I'll not say in what year that very gracious lady was born. But I may certainly say that she'll always be phenomenally young, and a most marvelous and queenly example to us all. With several sorts of regality to choose from, it is wonderful how she and His Majesty infallibly pick the right sort of regality. It could not be better done.

Brock

Today is also the anniversary of Great Britain's declaration of war in 1914. Some of us are able to recall that day. I myself was only four at the time, and can't remember the agonizing July that went before the fatal date.

The murders at Serajevo meant nothing to me, and the mobilizing failed to frighten me. It seemed an excellent July to me. I was at Prince Edward Island, with some brothers and a nurse, and we spent our time picking wild strawberries and sliding down terrific sand-dunes and swimming at the edge of the surf and mucking about with a red clay which we called Can-a marooky. We also teased bulls, when they were safely tied up. The tighter they were tied, the braver we got.

I CAN recember my birthday that year, when I was four. My mother had sent a little trunk full of food and presents all the way from Ottawa. My two elder brothers had walked a great many miles into Charlottetown, on a blazing morning, to pick up the little trunk. It was far too heavy for two boys (of 10 and 11) to carry back along a dozen miles of hot road, so they jettisoned some of the cargo. They ate as much of my birthday food as their stomachs would hold, and they threw the rest into a ditch. (I'm still indignant about that, 37 years later, though I have long seen their point. It's too late to sue them anyhow. The Statute of Limitations makes me about 31 years late now.)

AMONG other things in the trunk were some toy clarinettes. Two were still fairly intact and one was badly broken. My brothers gave me the broken one. Each time I objected and said "Whose birthday is it?" they replied "Who carried the trunk?" And it did no good to say "Who ate the food?" because they still answered wearily, "Who carried the trunk?" I'd not be a bit surprised if I didn't have some awful subconscious feeling of guilt about that wretched trunk, all because my brothers did their best to make me feel responsible for the heavy load, the hot morning, the broken toys, and the vanished food.

I DID get one thing out of the trunk, though. It was a volume of poems by Eugene Field, illustrated by that disgusting Maxfield Parrish. (It seemed then, and seems now, like a queer choice for a kid of four.) Most of the poems were about orphans and sudden death and poison and ghosts and little children going off in declines and that sort of merriment. But the end-papers had a good picture of a lobster on them. Living on Prince Edward Island, I was a bit of an expert on lobsters, and I liked that lobster picture very much. Even though it was bright red while still alive, a color scheme unknown to uncooked lobsters. And even though lobsters gave me asthma and cramps. I had several very successful nightmares about that picture.

WELL, when my brothers got back with the little half-empty trunk and unpacked the wreckage for my delight, they informed me we were going to have a war. They had just heard the news in Charlottetown. (If that was on August 4, they must have taken about four days to get my little trunk, since my birthday was July 31. But that's all right with me now. Forget it. Skip it. This lenience becomes me well.) They said we were going to be able to crush the vile Germans at last. We didn't exactly drink to Der Tag, as I remember, but I know we skipped for joy on the verandah of the little farm-hotel. "A war, a war, we're going to have a war," I sang, and hopped off to tell my nurse the wonderful, wonderful news. She wasn't as thrilled as she should have been, somehow. But she was a lot calmer than she'd have been if she'd seen the next four years looming up. Or the next 37 years. And while the lights were going out all over Europe (was it Sir Edward Grey who said that?), we turned our thoughts to cake, our appetite whetted by a stimulating war. Once a year, at this time, I think of that amazing scene. You must remember we were very small. I must try to remember that fact myself. But I must not try to wish I was small once more.

Being A Chronicle Of Our Times

MONDAY 30TH—I rose today, feeling a chill breeze from the sea as I stood at my casement and cautiously I donned my weskit again. But as the day wore on I was vexed to find the zephyr a false prophet and I sweltered. My lunch was a light snack in which tomatoes and bacon were place between pieces of toast, and the tomatoes were much in evidence, the meat meagre. The girl ignored my protests. To me came Mistress Helen Hurn, smilingly, and we talked of food and meat, she saying a protein diet which she must follow fills her more with amazement at prices than with substantial nourishment. She in good spirits, nevertheless, and happy that her son Master Kenneth has been appointed to a city school, and pleased to think she will, in the year, greet a new daughter-in-law. On the streets I met Robert Smith, whose Scottish tongue delighted or did not delight the vast audience at the Highland games, he confiding he had listened to his voice rebroadcast and been surprised to note its Scotchness, which made me chuckle, though I hid it from him. Also did I see Master Bill Wilson, whose wife judged Highland dancing. He stayed away until late in the contest, having little taste for the music. Piping, he thinks, is fine in its place, yet he left the impression that place was in plumbing and heating installations, or on the blouses of young girls. Through the long afternoon I labored at my place of business, leaving late and eating heartily at home to make up for my light luncheon. Then to a walk through my gardens, sore tried that the weeds grew well while the flowers wilt. And so to bed.

* * *

TUESDAY 31ST—Rose to my labors and a stout breakfast of smoked pork slices and eggs cooked in boiling fat, also toasted bread well buttered and coffee with cream. These are not such as my doctor ordered, and I fear my growing girth will give public advertisement of my misdemeanor. To my office by carriage, expressing the wish as usual that the distance were not so great, that I might walk instead of ride, and thus be exercised, but being secretly happy enough in the existing circumstances. Pleased that so fair a day—and we have had many—is here to greet H.M.C.S. Nootka, returning from the Far Eastern war, for many in this navy-minded community will wish to be on hand to welcome ship and men. To me was brought news that Dr. Herbert Murphy, active these many years in scientific studies for medical advancement, will seek retirement. And so we wish him long years of pleasant pastimes. For dinner I enjoyed a roasted chicken, with just the correct amount of bay leaf in the bread stuffing, a matter oft bumbled by too-generous handed chefs. For if there be one thing in cookery more despicable than parsimony it is over-generosity in flavors. To bed at a respectable hour, under the chiding of my wife that I do read too late. And I was amazed on retiring to realize that this be the last day of July and the summer fast ebbing.

* * *

WEDNESDAY, 1ST—Up brightly and it seems we should sing "Hail Shining Morn," so fine are the days. I went early to my tailor's to buy a light costume, fingering his gabardines. But, alas, he thinks they are made of cloth of gold, so high is the price. I came out more satisfied with the clothes I have, which will do another year. To me at my place of business came Mistress A. S. Wyllie, joyed that her Arts Centre project wins such warm support in town. She did tell me of plans to make a fireproof structure on grounds they now seek—that fine Spencer home which has smiled on aristocracy. In truth the city is turning to the finer things and may well claim a better place in fields of culture. Late in the day I journeyed by carriage to the country, finding it pleasantly cool in the woods. To tea with Mistress Copeland, whose daughters make merrie at the lake shore, then home by carriage well content with the day.

* * *

THURSDAY, 2ND—A monotony of sunlit days and warm airs—and I love it. To my office where work awaited and in the midst of computing my finances came news of a further increase in general prices. Now this is the evil of the day and occasions great outcry amongst the populace, as savings are depleted in value. But few appear to suffer unduly despite growing perturbation, and the shops report many sales. To my club for lunch for which I selected, at the suggestion of Master John Shaw, a sausage and Spanish onion served between two slices of bread, in the manner of the Earl of Sandwich, and found these unusual components well suited. In the billiard room did observe Master Wm. Gage dismaying his opponent, Master Rob't Tye, with prodigious feats of skill and dexterity, and I could not stay to witness the slaughter. Spent the afternoon at my work, which is made no lighter by the heat of the day and the attraction of the open air. A frugal supper, as befits a growing waistline and a diminishing wallet; and so, with a last look from my window, to bed.

* * *

FRIDAY 3RD—To me this morning comes word that Master Percy George, capably serving as mayor of the city these past years, has been chosen to stand for provincial office. And this I see as proof that honesty, good sense, common humanity and simple dignity will take a man far. And we could wish there were more like him. My lunch was a salad, with vinegar sauce and a touch of red pepper, followed by pastries in the Parisian fashion on which I did gorge too much. It is a man's pleasures, not his misfortunes, that cause his downfall. In the late afternoon to a social gathering to meet a group of journalists visiting from England the better to understand conditions in Canada. There did converse with divers guests, including Premier Johnson and his good wife, Master and Mistress Ted Sanderson, Master and Mistress Geoff Edgelow, Harold Nockold of The Times of London, Thomas Wisdom of the Daily Herald and many others of that goodly company. Later to my club for further talks and merrymaking and so to a Chinese establishment where we did partake of exotic foods of the Orient. Thence to bed, with dreams of trans-Atlantic airplanes and trans-Pacific dragons.

Reporter Sees Great Progress Made In Paris As War Wounds Heal, But Are Not Forgotten

By MICHAEL BARKWAY, Correspondent of Saturday Night and the Victoria Daily Times From Ottawa

THERE IS AN excitement and a magic about flying the Atlantic which neither the technicians nor the commercial promoters have quite managed to kill. Only yesterday it was magic enough to eat even a sandwich in flight. To fly the Atlantic was miracle enough without expecting to be comfortable as well. Now you are invited to fly the Atlantic for the sake of the meals that will be served to you.

Barkway

At least two European airlines advertise their seven-course champagne meals. And in the course of a flight which lasts a little more than 12 hours from Montreal direct to Paris, Air France manages to serve two of these splendid repasts. Since you also have to lose five hours during the flight, it is the sleep which goes short.

I took the precaution of setting my watch five hours ahead after taking off from Montreal: and after a large "lunch" I managed—not surprisingly—to go to sleep. But I was awakened at what my watch called one a.m.—and indeed was one a.m. by Paris time—to eat another big meal. By Montreal time it was eight p.m., and I suppose in that particular patch of air which we happened to occupy it was about ten p.m. But barely four hours later it was time for "petit dejeuner." Since I couldn't repeat the feat of going to sleep coffee was never more welcome.

Of the champagne argument for flying the Atlantic I can only say that if the whole affair is less sumptuous than the advertisements ask you to imagine, it is still very good. In heaven, I suppose, the reality will correspond to the copy-writers' most golden dreams. But how many copy-writers will be there to enjoy the blissful consummation?

The trans-Atlantic airport for Paris is at Orly, and it was specially good to land there because Orly field was where I landed in August, 1944. We had flown over from London in one of those uncomfortable but enduring U.S. Army Dakotas which seemed to be tied together with binder twine, but can't have been.

Taxi-ing in we dodged bomb-craters like a 19th Century lady dodging the puddles in 19th Century streets. The field was surrounded by the skeletons of bombed-out hangars. It was a scene of complete desolation. Today work is still going on to improve the airport. But the big runways are superb, and the terminal building is at least as good as anything we have in Canada.

It was good to get this early reminder of where Europe started from so short a time ago.

All through the Paris streets I have noticed tourists staring bewildered at the stone plaques which decorate so many walls as memorials to young men who were shot by the Germans in the "month of liberation" in 1944. They may now seem a little absurd.

INVALUABLE REMINDER

But if you can remember the emotions of Parisians—and indeed of all Frenchmen—at the time, if you remember the scribbled notice (always fronted by flowers) which these stone plaques have replaced, or the care taken by the Allies not to undermine the legend that Paris had liberated itself, if you remember these things the little stone plaques, like the renewed airport at Orly, are an invaluable reminder of the transformation that western Europe has undergone. And if we in North America could be more aware of this, we would be less impatient than we often are.

'Life Of The City Is Friendly And Kind'

By FRANK S. MORLEY, From Vienna

IN VIENNA I asked a prominent diplomat who had lived a long time in the country what the most striking fact about Austrian life was. He replied, "The recovery of the country. In 1946 there were no shops, no food. In 1951, food is abundant, shops are full and there is great activity in industry."

Indeed he was right. I had debated whether or not Vienna was worth getting into because of transport difficulties. My tour agency had been quite ignorant of the complexities of the problem and I could only arrange it with some considerable trouble but I will always be grateful that I did.

Vienna is a delightful city in one of the loveliest countries in the world. Normally there are two opera houses filled every night, a music-lover's paradise. The whole cultural life of the city is friendly and kind, much more so than are the Italians. The climate is not muggy, as is the Italian, and in comparing Rome with Vienna one is struck by the extraordinary cleanliness of the latter.

Vienna has its glories. It was designed extravagantly to be the capital city of a great empire. The streets are wide, with impressive boulevards. It is a city of statues, with one at every corner. There is nothing more magnificent in Europe than the gardens and rooms of the Schonbrunn palace. In contrast to Paris, where the French have allowed Versailles to deteriorate, Vienna loves the past and has kept her treasures with jealous care.

There are sectors in Vienna but, unlike Berlin, one may pass freely from one to the other except that it is very unwise to cross the Danube at night. There are also zone boundaries but one may pass from one zone to the other with proper credentials.

Marshall aid has pumped fresh resources into the whole country. I was amazed about this and officials were willing to agree that a good deal of it was being siphoned off into the Russian zone. They thought, however, that it was worth doing because the country remained a nominal unit.

As a matter of fact, quadrapartite control actually works in Vienna and Austria. There are regular weekly meetings of the occupying powers and there is no veto. In the event of a disagreement, a two-two vote is sufficient for a proposal to become law.

I had always thought of Austria as a poor country, but I learned it has enormous natural resources. The Nazi occupation, with all its faults, did develop these.

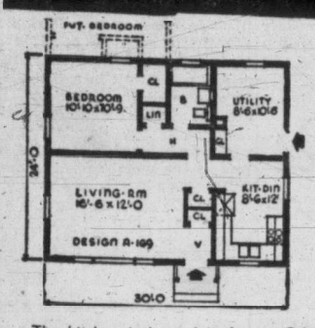
It is a curious fact that competition still exists despite nationalization. The banks, for example, are nationalized but fight each other keenly for credits.

The Austrian government keeps a rigid control on rents. It may seem hard to believe, but workers can obtain an apartment of two rooms for thirty schillings a month, $1.20 in Canadian money. Modern apartment blocks run for long stretches through the city, surely one of the greatest housing projects in the world. Better apartments with bath may be had for eighty schillings.

One Austrian worker told me his family had a nice apartment before the war for nine schillings monthly but now pay thirty. However, the wages of the head of the family increased from three hundred schillings a month pre-war to nine hundred today. Rents such as these help to make Vienna the cheapest capital in the world for the worker.

The Austrian is scared of war and is afraid of being thrown to the Russians. He believes war will come but hopes he will not be called upon to participate. Despite this inner fear, there are no signs of "war jitters." The Austrian goes his way enjoying life to the full, a thing for which he has an infinite capacity. Seated in one of the little Austrian restaurants or gardens, enjoying the world's choicest foods and listening to Viennese music, it is hard to realize that there is trouble in the world.

Yet when I passed on my travels out of the Russian zone I felt myself a much happier man. Freedom is wonderful.



THE ANSELM was designed particularly for the couple. Its plan has just one bedroom but is arranged so another bedroom may be added without disturbing the exterior and using the present closets for a future hall.

If a second bedroom is to be added, the rear window becomes the door to the bedroom closet. A second window is added in the present bedroom.

The kitchen is located in front. Cabinets are arranged to leave dining space under the side window. There is no basement, the heating unit and laundry being located in a utility room adjoining the kitchen.

Frame construction is used throughout, with the first floor slab on a gravel fill, wide siding and asphalt shingles.

Overall dimensions of the Anselm are 30 feet by 24 feet. Area is 720 square feet, while the cubage totals 8,280 cubic feet.

Heavy Crop Loss In Peace River

CALGARY (CP)—Hailstones so heavy that they stripped bark from trees fell recently in the Peace River district of northern Alberta.

N. D. McFarlane, agent at Beaver Lodge, about 30 miles west of Grande Prairie, has sent a detailed report on the storm to J. Glen Elder, chairman of the Hail Insurance Board. It was made public today.

Crop loss on 10,000 acres was almost 100 per cent, Mr. McFarlane said in his letter. Because the district had had hail only once before in 32 years, only 10 per cent of the crop was insured.

The storm hit July 26. At Rio Grande, near Beaver Lodge, "the fields look as if they had been over-grazed by large flocks of sheep.

"Windows were broken, bark stripped off trees, shingle roofs ruined and glass from the windows driven into the floor by an estimated 90-miles-an-hour wind. The people took refuge in the cellar."

Mr. McFarlan said hailstones were golfball size and covered fields to a depth of six inches.

Aiming Again At Free Press

The radio blasted La Nacion for failing to join the pro-government press in denouncing Aug. 1 bombings on Argentine railways as alien-inspired.

La Nacion reported the explosions and also reported developments in the railway strike which has disrupted long-distance train service for the last four days. It made no editorial comment.

The pro-government press ignored the strike which has forced the government to draft railway workers throughout the country. These papers concentrated on the bombings which they said were acts of sabotage inspired by alien forces and anti-Peron politicians.

HOME GARDEN

by Hilda Beastall

While August is essentially summer with ample sunlight and warmth during the day, it is also a time of preparation for the colder months ahead.

Hilda

There is now a slight coolness in the air when the sun disappears over the hill, a warning that the house plants which stood in the partial shade of trees or shrubs all summer will soon need to be brought inside again.

See that the pots of the woody plants such as azaleas, heathers, oleanders, hibiscus and camellias are receiving plenty of water. The dry winds and continuous sun cause rapid evaporation of moisture, and a pot full of roots will need water twice a day if the plant is to thrive.

Be sure to have a well ventilated corner of the greenhouse, or sunroom, ready to receive the plants. They will not be happy if suddenly moved to a close atmosphere.

Zygocactus truncatus (the Christmas flowering cactus) should be kept well watered until September to ensure new growth and a balanced shape. When brought inside, it is given a month's rest with only sufficient water to prevent complete drying out. This sets the flower buds, and subsequent weak feedings of liquid fertilizer will develop them in time for the holiday season.

Other jungle types of cacti, such as the epiphyllums with their long flat leaves and enormous water-lily-like blooms, continue to receive plenty of moisture while outside in the shade. Watering must decrease as the weather becomes cooler, and be reduced to a minimum when they are brought back into the house or greenhouse for the winter.

"OUR OFFICE IS A SHOWROOM"

Private School Standards High

All Around Training Object Of Curriculum

The private schools of Vancouver Island, well known throughout the world for their excellent scholastic standing, pride themselves on graduating students fit to take prominent places in any field of endeavor they might choose.

Although placing emphasis on all the newest aspects of education, they also expose students to the broad and fundamental background of classical literature, music and art that gives a proper perspective to learning.

Such a background, it has been found, also develops in the individual a sense of taste and values that will stay with him and add to his stature even in the most matter-of-fact pursuits of every-day existence.

"SOUND MIND"

The schools stress "a sound mind in a sound body." Along with the classroom studies goes a well-rounded athletic program.

Even the youngest students are sent out to the playing fields where they receive excellent instruction in games.

The retiring child who ordinarily would refrain from taking part in games is given confidence and encouragement, and is launched into an activity that would otherwise be lost to him for life.

Swimming and life-saving techniques, horseback riding, fencing and archery are a few of the activities found in the generally broad curricula of the schools.

SPORTS PROGRAM

Outstanding, though, are the competitive sports and track events, always looked forward to by the students. In these each pupil comes to enjoy the long practise required to excel, the exhilaration of actual competition, and the easy comaraderie of the locker room that can only be fully understood through the meduim of the playing field.

The schools have never failed in their aim of sending well-rounded men on to colleges and universities, and their records of their "old boys," who have made names for themselves in business, professions, and the armed services, more than prove the worth of their maintaining such high objects and ideals.

Popular Performers At Amateur Show

(From AP and UP Dispatches)

The dismissal of 90 West Point cadets for cheating in exams brought demands today for congressioanl investigation of the military academy—including its football activities.

Senator Milton R. Young (Rep., N.D.) urged Congress to probe the possibility that over-emphasis on football led to the breakdown in the academy's famed honor system.

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief-of-staff, was reported to have blamed such over-emphasis Friday in telling lawmakers of the mass dismissals, largest in the academy's 149-year history. Senators said he hinted that a majority of the academy's game-winning football players cheated on exams because football practise cut down their opportunities to study.

West Point officials said the academy football team will play its fall schedule—win or lose.

FACULTY ABSOLVED

Army sources said no faculty members at West Point were involved.

The dismissed cadets were accused either of giving or accepting outside help to pass classroom tests during the past four or five years.

Senators said they were told 80 of the cadets had admitted breaking the honor code and that the others probably would face a court martial or special trial to determine the guilt. The army withheld the names of those dismissed.

The dismissals were made as "general discharge" rather than dishonorable discharge, which carries much greater stigma.

The army defined this as "discharge under honorable service satisfactory, soldier not qualifying for honorable discharge."

Some 1,600 to 1,700 cadets now at West Point were said to have been stunned by the action. The academy has a total enrollment of 2,520.

It was learned some of the cadets would take an examination and then pass on the qeustions to those taking it later, so they could cram for it.

No action was taken against graduates accused in the affair because they are commissioned officers. Many have seen combat and some have been killed in Korea.

ELIGIBLE FOR DRAFT

A selective service spokesman said the cadets who forgot the army's motto of "duty, honor, country" will be processed in "routine fashion" by their local draft boards. But he said since most are 18 to 23, without dependents and healthy they will be called up as "1-A."

Few of their scornful fellow students know their identity, but those who do offered them only the haughty "silent treatment" in the wake of the 150-year-old academy's greatest scandal.

No Prosecutions In Raffle Tickets

Attorney-General Gordon Wismer said Friday there will be no prosecutions in the sale of raffle tickets for the Penticton Peach Festival as threatened earlier.

Officials of the festival had voluntarily suspended the raffle when advised by legal counsel it was contrary to the Criminal Code, the Attorney-General stated.

Soap Box Derby Entry Blank In Today's Times

Approximately 100 Victoria and other Vancouver Island youngsters anxious to match their sleek little racers in the sixth annual soap box derby here Labor Day can enter immediately by filling out the application blank printed in this issue of The Victoria Daily Times.

Entry forms must be mailed to R. H. Abbott, 135 Bushby Street, chairman of the race committee handling the meet for the sponsors—Knights of Pythias, Wilson Motors and The Victoria Daily Times.

"We can expect a good entry list," Mr. Abbott said today. "Every night for the last two weeks I've had telephone calls from boys asking when they can make their entries for the race."

The speedway classic in miniature will begin at 9 a.m. Labor Day. Cars will start on a ramp at the top of Yates Street Hill and coast to the finish line between Cook and Vancouver Streets.

Indications are that boys who have raced in previous years and still come within the age limit will be entered. In addition, a good many lads have partly finished cars that they hope to have completed in time for "Derby Day."

Most interest will centre around the Class A cars, built to specifications of the All-American Soap Box Derby, and which are called "soap boxes" by custom only.

There will also be a contest for the Class B cars, which follow tradition of a box on wheels and do not meet the requirements for the higher class. According to the committee, anything that has four wheels and is found safe to operate is eligible for Class B.

Milk Board Plan Hearing On Bid For Price Boost

In response to an application by Vancouver Island Dairymen's Association, hard hit by the summer's drought, B.C. Milk Board will hold a public hearing Aug. 13 at 10 a.m. at the K. of P. Hall, 723 Cormorant Street, to consider an increase in the wholesale price of fluid milk.

Board chairman E. C. Carr conferred in Victoria Friday with Department of Agriculture officials and representatives of producers' groups.

"We know we have a good case to present," said Henry Robinson, association secretary. "Since it is a public hearing I hope there will be a good attendance. We want everyone in the city to know what we are up against."

The way feed, pasturage, and labor conditions are at present, he said, farmers must either "get a fair price or there will be no milk this winter."

No price was mentioned in the application, but it is understood the dairymen will seek at least a 20 per cent boost in the price received from the wholesaler. This would raise the $5 for 10 gallons to $6.

Producers have shown that to pay wages of $1.05 per hour milk must be sold at well over even the $6 rate.

According to mainland reports, where similar drought conditions are suffered by Fraser Valley producers, it is expected the canned and powdered milk industry will be seriously affected, since most of the reduced milk supply is needed for the whole milk market.

Attention was drawn to the dairymen's plight in a series of reports in the Times last month, which pointed out that due to adverse conditions production of operating farms had fallen off, herds were being sold at an alarming rate, crops of winter importing feed for the coming importing feed fo rthe coming winter would be too much for producers to meet at present milk prices.

NURSERY SCHOOL FOR LITTLEST ONES

'Getting Along' Important Point

Let us see what a good nursery school can do for you and your child. A nursery school caters to children of pre-school age, that is from two to five years—very important years in the child's life. What a multitude of things there are to be learned; what very busy little people they are.

One of the most important things they must learn is to get along with other children. To learn this the child must have the companionship of others of his own age.

The nursery school does provide such a group and what is even more important, provides it under constant supervision by trained people.

Secondly the child of this age needs a wide variety of play materials. In the nursery school he will find ample choice of materials for both indoor and outdoor play, under supervision that in no way hampers his choice.

Thirdly, before going to the regular school, he should learn to take care of himself and his physical needs. The home is such a busy place that often it is expedient to do things for the child which he should be learning himself, but at the expense of time and patience while he learns. In the nursery school, with equipment built to his size he is gradually taught to take responsibility for all these things himself.

The fourth thing that the nursery school includes in its schedule is the help in training the child, which is given to parents through the discussion groups. With your child in a nursery school for a few hours every day, both of you acquire a freshness and uplift, especially if there is a still younger child in the home. The older child has a sense of new importance and a wealth of new experiences to bring home to you. With his newly-acquired skills you will find him more able to amuse himself alone or with others. The nursery school is not taking your child away; it has no desire to take the place of the home but rather to work with you and to help you do the best for your child.

Damage Suit Must Continue

LOS ANGELES (UP) — Defendants in a slander suit brought by playwright Emmet Lavery for $1,000,000 failed today to have a final $200,000 claim thrown out of court, after the rest of the complaint was dismissed.

Superior Judge Arnold Praeger denied a defense motion to throw out the claim for damages Lavery said was done to his play, "The Gentleman From Athens" as a result of a broadcast by Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of actress Ginger Rogers.

Mrs. Rogers, who gave the radio speech Sept. 2, 1947, is one of eight defendants in the suit. She termed the play "un-American propaganda."

Defense attorneys urged dismissal of the claim for damages on grounds it was impossible to fix the value of a literary property until it has proven itself. Attorney Pat A. McCormick said Lavery's play had only a five-day run on Broadway.

The jury would have to determine the state of the theatre going public to determine damages, McCormick said. "If it were possible there would never be a flop on Broadway," he stated.

Claire Given Time For Wedding Plans

MILAN, Italy (AP)—Police today renewed Claire Young's permit to remain in Italy, the day before its expiration.

The blonde, 21-year-old Chicago girl thereby won time to make arrangements to wed Liciano Negrini, former Roman Catholic priest, whom she followed to Italy a year ago.

Claire's permit was renewed for three months.

Claire said, "Finally I got it. Now I can sleep nights."

Westerham School Offers Kindergarten Facilities

Kindergarten children, pre-primary groups and Grades I and II may find a happy field of young endeavor at Westerham School on Cranmore Road.

This school, which began its career as a kindergarten, is now being expanded to accommodate also Grades I and II. In response to many requests by parents, Miss Elvidge has decided to increase the scope of the school and a new residence is being built so that extra classrooms will be available at the school.

Specialized certificated teachers of wide experience will conduct the various activities and it is felt that a first-class foundation school will result in a realization by small children that school life can be happy and satisfying. Music, singing, dancing, handwork and physical training as well as the usual school subjects will engage the energies of the various groups and the children should be well qualified to take their places in the higher grades when the time comes to proceed to bigger schools.

Margaret's Beau Rumored To Be Wallace

LONDON (Reuters) — London gossip writers veered toward the name of Billy Wallace as Princess Margaret's husband-to-be today with the announcement that he has been invited to her 21st birthday, Aug. 21.

Wallace, 24, is the son of the late Capt. E. Wallace, a government minister. His mother now is married to Herbert Agar, the United States author.

Royal romance rumors spring up each year as another birthday rolls round. This year the three most often mentioned are Wallace, the youthful Scottish Earl of Dalkeith and Lord Ogilvie.

But today's announcement put Wallace in the lead.

Germans United In Faith

A huge cross stands over the Olympic Stadium in Berlin, symbol of the faith that drew 300,000 lay and clerical delegates from all parts of Germany for the third post-war Evangelical Church Congress. It was the largest religious gathering in Germany since the war ended. The body voted to condemn Communist infiltration of youth and forced labor in the Soviet zone.

WEEKLY SERMON

Paul's Message Valid

When Saint Paul wrote to Timothy (II Timothy 2.15): "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," he was probably referring to Timothy's work as a Christian leader "rightly dividing the word of truth."

But Paul would undoubtedly have applied the same principle to all work in the business of earning a living, or perhaps one should say more properly earning the right to live. Paul thought that everything should be done to the glory of God (I Corinthians 10:31), and he was very specific on the matter of earning the right to live.

Paul reminds the Christians that they were members one of another. He said that the strong should serve the weak, and that all Christians should by love serve one another. (Romans 15:1; Galatians 5:13).

But when he saw certain unworthy ones taking advantage of the good will of others, and using these fine Christian principles of brotherly love, not to serve and do their part, but to infringe upon the work of others, he was blunt and decisive. If a man did not work, he said, neither should he eat. In the Christian economy everyone should help his brother, but there was no place for loafers.

That was a sound principle; but what Paul did not foresee was the situation in a modern complex society when, in periods of deep depression, many who asked only for work and self-help, were unable to find it.

What would Paul have had to say about this? I do not know; but I do know that all the problems associated with work, unemployment, and living, are moral and spiritual problems, with which Christian teaching and principles have much to do. Those who, for various reasons find themselves dependent upon relief, are by no means either unworthy, dishonest, or indigent. Probably this is true of the great majority of the needy, and the actually lazy and indigent bring unjust criticism upon measures inherently humane.

At the foundation of all welfare, individual and social, is character. The very conditions of life today are character-testing, and the only character that stands the test is the character built upon the ancient Judaic and Christian standards of integrity, regard for others, and devotion to the commonweal.

These things need emphasis in every local community and in our national life.

Missing C.P.A. Airlift Plane Trail Dimming

But search officials said they have no intention of giving up the hunt yet. "We never actually give up hope," one said.

The Canadian Pacific Airlines plane with 38 aboard vanished two weeks ago today somewhere over the Alaska Panhandle, the jagged strip of mountain and fjord which hooks south from Alaska proper.

The latest two of six clues turned up Friday when an Alaska Coastal Airlines pilot said he and his passengers saw a yellow life raft and a fisherman reported finding a case of army rations.

Fog prevented a U.S. coast guard cutter from searching for the life raft last night. A plane was to pick up the army rations and take them to search headquarters at Juneau, Alaska, for inspection.

The other four possible leads were traced down and discarded. Weak distress signals stuttered out of the north the day after the plane's disappearance. But their source could not be determined and searchers said they doubted that the SOS. came from survivors.

A little more than a week later, a shoe was found washed up on an Alaska beach, it turned out that it had been thrown overboard from a fishing vessel.

Early in the week, a trucker reported he had seen what looked like a plane's wreckage high on a maintainside. An air check showed it to be a glacier.

Some 30 planes have been searching every day since the plane disappeared. These include aircraft of the U.S. Air Force from Alaska and Washington state, R.C.A.F. planes from Whitehorse, Y.T., Prince Rupert, B.C., and Vancouver, and C.P.A. planes.

Two U.S. coast guard cutters have probed inlets along the panhandle as well.

Still—nothing.

Poultry Flocks Being Vaccinated

Vaccination of B.C. poultry flocks against dreaded Newcastle disease is continuing at a fast pace, it was learned today from government agriculturists.

Only one case of the disease was reported in the past week.

In the six days 55 poultry flocks, conatining 23,628 chickens, and two turkey flocks, containing 900 birds, were vaccinated.

The disease, which wiped out a large section of the poultry industry in B.C. last year, is continuing to give trouble in the neighboring province of Alberta.

BEDTIME STORY

by Thornton W. Burgess

Strange as it may seem 'tis true
Silence sometimes shouts to you.
—Old Mother Nature.

Striped Chipmunk was singing. Yes, sir, he was singing. Anyway he called it singing. He was expressing his happiness with his voice, and if that isn't singing what is it? It wasn't musical like the songs of the birds. It wasn't what you would call sweet, but in its way it was just as good to hear as the happy singing of the feathered folk.

Striped Chipmunk was sitting on the old stonewall between the Old Orchard and the Green Meadows. He loves the old stonewall. He never feels wholly comfortable when he is away from the old sonewall. He loves to pop in and out between the stones. He knows every opening for the whole length of the old wall. Somewhere down underneath that wall is the doorway to his home in the ground. It is secret. It is a secret that only he and Mrs. Chipmunk know. There is no more precious secret for very little folks than that of their home.

Happiness is catching. In this respect it is like the whooping cough and the measles. Striped Chipmunk had been out and about ever since jolly, round bright Mr. Sun had started his morning climb up in the blue, blue sky. He had had a good breakfast. It is always well to start a day with a good breakfast. It is the foundation of a day's happiness. Now with nothing to do Striped Chipmunk was telling all the Great World how good he felt and how happy he was. He had reason to be happy. Down in that secret home was another secret. It was the most precious kind of a secret. Can you guess what it was? Of course you can. Little Mrs. Striped Chipmunk was Mother Chipmunk now. Indeed, she had been a mother for some time. In the snug little nursery down in the ground were four babies whose eyes were not yet open. Mother thought they were the most beautiful babies in all the Great World. Of course, this doesn't mean that they were. All mothers think that of their babies when they are very little. And so they are in a mother's eye although they may be the homeliest babies in all the Great World in the eyes of other people. You will find that what anything looks like largely depends on who is looking at it.

Striped Chipmunk didn't have much to do with the babies, but he knew they were there with their mother and that was sufficient. So he was happy and he just had to sing his happiness. It is a pity that there are not more people like Striped Chipmunk to sing their happiness to the Great World. There is not enough singing. There is no more successful way of sharing happiness than in song.

Now Striped Chipmunk has neighbors in the bushes beside the old stonewall, feathered folk who nest there or just visit there every day. Some of these were singing now. There was happiness and joy the whole length of the stonewall. It was a joyful chorus with Striped Chipmunk a sort of leader of it. Anyway, that is how it seemed to Farmer Brown's Boy who was listening.

Suddenly the harsh voice of Sammy Jay crying "Thief, thief, theif!" broke into that happy chorus. Instantly there was silence. Not a voice was to be heard. It was silence that could be felt, or so it seemed. It was a stillness that fairly shouted "DANGER!" Of course, it didn't truly shout, but the meaning of that sudden stillness was as well understood as if it had truly shouted.

All the tongues along the old stonewall were still. All the ears along the old stonewall were listening. All the eyes along the old stonewall were watching. Such a stillness!

The next story: What Watching Eyes Saw.

TEE TOPICS

By BILL WALKER

About 10.30 tomorrow night in the clubhouse at Point Grey Golf Club, secretary Joe Howat of the British Columbia Golf Association will say to the assembled gathering: "Thank you gentlemen, a motion to adjourn is now in order."

When that motion is made the names of B.C. Willingdon Cup golf team will be announced, and that list will include defending Canadian amateur champion Bill Mawhinney, B.C. Closed champion Walt McElroy, runner-up to the B.C. amateur and B.C. Closed championships—Bob Fleming, and two others.

Walker

At least those three names should appear if the selections are based on season's play.

With the cup trials currently being played today in Victoria and concluding tomorrow at Vancouver, the only doubts that should exist in the minds of the committee rests with the selection of the fourth member and a team alternate.

★ ★ ★

It is not automatic for the B.C. junior representative — in this case Laurie Roland, the provincial junior champion—to be named alternate as is thought in some quarters to be the case.

★ ★ ★

The Victoria contingent playing in the trials include Bob Morrison, captain of last year's team, Bill McColl, former Willingdon Cupper, Gordon Verley, Vic Painter and George Bigelow.

A. V. Macan, the former Irish champion, but now the inner wheel behind the Northwest Seniors' Golf Association annual tournament which commences at Oak Bay Aug. 13, is a busy man.

Not only is "A. V." compiling entries for the annual show but also is "conditioning" Seattle Golf Club for the U.S. National Amateur scheduled for the Sound City in 1952. Between trips to Seattle, Macan has been eliminating one of Point Grey's most bothersome holes and working over the Tacoma Country Club.

★ ★ ★

Entries for the Seniors' tourney have reached the 160 mark with defending champion Ralph Whaley and Dr. Oscar Willing of Portland among the missing, though their appearance is a foregone conclusion. Other notables to compete include last year's runner-up Dick Bell Irving of Vancouver, former champion Gerry McManama, Ed Eisenhower of Tacoma, Everett Briggs, Ralph Parker, Roy Wood and George Sullivan.

The international match will be played Sunday preceding the tourney.

Though the rattlesnakes don't pop up out of the cup to divert a putt, golfers in Penticton usually carry a club in their hands whenever they have occasion to go into the rough. The little reptiles are there and sometimes they don't rattle.

★ ★ ★

The semi-official closing of Colwood's old clubhouse takes place tonight with a greensome and buffet supper. The move to the new quarters is expected on or about Aug. 15.

★ ★ ★

Two tournaments don't often produce a champion but Rae Milligan of Jasper, Alta., is an exception. The 17-year-old miss, daughter of a golf pro, last week won the Alberta championship in her first try to become the second lass of those tender years to win a provincial bauble this year. Freckled faced Marlene Stewart was the other in the Ontario championships.

★ ★ ★

Miss Milligan gained a place on the Alberta inter-provincial team when a true sportswoman, Mrs. H. Adams, stepped down.

★ ★ ★

Mostly it's been a quiet week on the local front with women's eyes on Margaret Todd in the Canadian tourney and all glimmers focused on the Willingdon Cup trials. Gorge Vale members will journey to Port Angeles Sunday, for a return match with the American team while Oak Bay's 24-man team will travel to Seattle with a 16-point lead for a joust with Seattle Club.

★ ★ ★

Defending champion Vic Lowe will head the field into the opening round of the Gorge Club championships next week.

★ ★ ★

Did you know that out of the 25,000,000 golf balls produced annually, one-half are lost?

★ ★ ★

Five Of The Province's Best

It's do or die starting today for the 16 top male golfers in the province as the opening round of the 72-hole Willingdon Cup trials got under way at Oak Bay Golf Club this morning at 9. Five of those seeking the five berths on the inter-provincial team as they awaited tee-off time are front row, left to right: Gordon Verley and Bill McColl. Back row: Bob Kidd, Bill Mawhinney and Hugh Morrison. Second 18 holes were scheduled for Colwood this afternoon with the test concluding with 36 holes at Marine Drive and Point Grey Sunday. The team will be named following Sunday's matches.

NET MEET CONCLUDES

Miller Outlasts Macken In Semis

It took three and a half gruelling hours but who will play today's B.C. tennis men's singles title was finally decided shortly after 5 yesterday afternoon.

From 1.30 top-seeded Merwin Miller and former Montrealer Jim Macken of Vancouver played like two machines in what was sometimes almost flawless tennis.

Miller finally came out on top simply because he refused to give up. He lost the first set 1-6 but came back to win the second 9-7. Macken looked superior in the third set and won 6-1. Miller, however, hung on in the final two stanzas to outlast Macken 7-5, 6-3.

LESS SPECTACULAR

In the other semifinal match second-seeded Paul Willey put on a less spectacular show to win 6-4, 6-0, 4-6, 7-5 from Joe Blatchford.

INTERNATIONAL FINAL

Thus this afternoon's final will have an international flavor for the second straight year. Miller is from California while Willey is a young Vancouver player. Last week in Vancouver the two met in the Western Canada final which Miller won. Yesterday's marathon, however, will have taken a lot out of Miller for today's match and may change last week's decision, Victoria officials feel.

In deference to the men's play, in which the seeding has been almost flawless so far, the ladies saw another upset yesterday. Muriel Kifer, second seeded, went down in defeat to Lois Reid of Vancouver, 6-1, 7-5. She will meet Connie Bowan of Hollywood in today's final. Miss Bowan, top seeded, won from Marilyn Kukay of Yakima, 6-1, 6-2.

AT IT AGAIN

Yesterday's doubles play saw Miller and Macken at it again. Charles Hickox of Berkeley and Miller defeated a determined Macken and Jack Kramer of San Francisco, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4, 6-1.

It will be Willey and Miller again in the doubles final as Lawrence Barclay and Willey, fellow Vancouverites, defeated juniors Martin Halfhill and Don McKee, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3, to advance into the finals today.

In junior veterans' play two finals were played in order to allow Dr. J. A. Crane to compete. He had to leave for Berkely last night.

A final was also played in the ladies' doubles so that Mrs. Crane could leave. Mrs. Kifer and Miss Reid defeated Mrs Crane and Miss Bowan, 6-3, 6-4.

The departure of the Cranes also caused one other change in plans. Miss Reid and Macken have yet to play their semifinal match with Victorians "Tommy" Elmsley and Parker.

MEN'S SINGLES SEMIFINALS
M. Miller, Pasadena, beat J. Macken, Vancouver, 1-6, 9-7, 1-6, 7-5, 6-3.

LADIES' DOUBLES SEMIFINALS

Leonard In First 30

CHICAGO (CP)—Stan Leonard of Vancouver scored a second-round 71 today — one under par—to join the top 30 players in the $15,000 All-American pro golf tourney. With Thursday's 73, Leonard posts a total of 144 for the first 36 holes.

AL SHOULD HAVE STAYED IN BED, THINKS BILL

Fate may have played a hand in costing Bill Osborn of the Athletic a no-hit, no-run game at Athletic Park last night. Fate, and a tired ball player.

It happened like this:

Sam Kanelos, who got the only hit off Osborn in his 6-0 conquest, wasn't scheduled to bat in the lead-off spot. Al Spaeter was.

A hurried telephone call got Spaeter there in time but not in time to take his regular place in the batting order.

Manager Charlie Peterson of the Braves made a hurried switch and moved Kanelos into the lead-off position.

VANCOUVER RINKS IN FINAL

Bowling Champions To Be Decided Today

The more than 500 contestants who started in the huge 24th annual holiday lawn bowling tournament have been whittled down to 36 bowlers as the tourney enters the finals today.

The greens at Canadian Pacific and Beacon Hill bowling clubs were packed today as all bowlers who did not make the finals turned out to watch the qualifiers vie for championship crowns. The rinks—men's, women's and mixed—make up 24 of the finalists. Other brackets which will be decided today are men's and women's doubles and singles.

Yesterday the bowling was confined to mixed rinks play as 70 foursomes met in the eliminations.

When all games had been completed two Vancouver rinks emerged as finalists. George Dewar's Terminal rink defeated Archie Findlay's Victoria West team by a close 14-13 score. Dewar's rink consists of himself as skip, with George Dixon, Mrs. Berry and Mrs. Galbraith.

West Vancouver, skippered by R. A. Bindlay, gained the other final spot by edging Harry Jackson's Burnside rink after a hard-fought match which went to the Vancouverites by the margin of a single point.

The finals started at 9 this morning with the men's events being run off at Beacon Hill greens and the women's at Canadian Pacific.

Barnum Holds Shaky Lead In Tam Golf

CHICAGO (UP) — The chase for first prize money of $2,250 in Tam O'Shanter's annual "All America" Open was narrowed down today, but big John Barnum of Grand Rapids, Mich., still held a shaky one-stroke margin after one "bad round."

Barnum, the first day leader with a stupendous eight-under-par 64, shot a 74 yesterday on his second tour of the 6,400-yard course, and every one of the bad swings came on the second nine. His 36-hole total of 138 left him barely ahead of the pack at the midway point.

Hard on his heels were Fred Hawkins, Lew Worsham, Al Besselink and Ted Kroll, all with 139. Lawson Little, Tommy Bolt, Cary Middlecroft and Lloyd Mangrum all had 140.

Babe Zaharias clipped off her second par round, a 76, for a 152 total for 36 holes to grab a two-stroke margin over Beverly Hanson, a newcomer to the pro ranks.

LAWN BOWLING

The final of the Gross Cup between Mr. and Mrs. C. Wood, Canadian Pacific Club, and Mr. and Mrs. Passmore, Burnside Club, will be played Tuesday at 7. Consolation round for players defeated in the first and second rounds of the competition are also scheduled at the Burnside Club.

WANDERING BILL CARR DUE TO JOIN A's AGAIN

This may sound like repetition, but pitcher Bill Carr is scheduled to join the Athletics today.

The elusive Carr was located last night—the exact position unknown, but believed to be somewhere between Vallejo, California and Seattle.

General manager Reg Patterson of the A's is the authority for the statement as he reportedly heard from Carr by telephone.

The substance of the report is that Carr was scheduled to arrive in Seattle at 6 this morning.

If Carr does arrive in town today it will close the chapter on an amazing mystery.

Carr first left his home 21 days ago to join the Athletics. He has been on the road off and on since that time, but seemingly disappears just when he is expected to show up.

Oddsmakers are offering 3 to 1, he doesn't make it by midnight. There are no takers.

Millmen Gain Final City Playoff Berth

B.C. Forest Products cinched the fourth and last playoff position in the Men's Senior A Softball League last night by beating out Chinese Students 4-3 in ten innings.

Although dates are unknown yet, Pitzer and Nex will meet Chinese Students in one semi-final series, and the Forest Products tangle with Butler Aces in the other half of the semi-finals, which will be decided by a best-three-of-five series.

Forest Products had to overcome a 3-0 lead that Students had in the top of the third inning. Barry Jackson pitched a home-run ball to Gar Taylor with two runners aboard, and after giving up a fourth hit to Quinton Mar, was replaced on the mound by Bud Ross.

GREAT RELIEF STUNT

Ross finished out the game in superb style to pick up his sixth win of the season as he held the Students to two singles over the last seven and two-thirds innings.

Gar Taylor opened on the hill for the losers and pitched effective ball for three innings as he retired the first nine batters.

Forest Products tied up the game in the bottom of the fifth and kept it that way until the bottom of the 10th, despite a determined threat by the Students in the ninth.

WINNING RUN

In the bottom of the 10th Roy Logie hit the first pitch thrown by Stan Tenning for a clean single to centre. The Millmen received the big break when Gordy Chow threw the ball into the dirt at first on an attempted pick-off play and Logie went around to third. Tenning passed the next two batters intentionally and then Bishop ended the game with a long fly to left, allowing Logie to score easily from third with the tie-breaking run.

Score follows:

		R.	H.	E.
Chinese Studts.	003 000 000 0	3	6	3
B.C. Forest Prod.	000 210 000 1	4	6	2

By BILL WALKER

When the Victoria Athletics broke training camp at Santa Rosa last April and headed north for the opening of the Western International League season, they were well stocked with pitchers—numerically at least.

They were so well stocked in fact that a quiet, unobtrusive chap by the name of Bill Osborn was more or less along for the ride. He didn't figure in the A's plans.

That was last spring.

Since that time this same Mr. Osborn has been one of the A's most consistent and willing performers.

Things haven't been going too well with the A's of late but Osborn, like other members of the overworked five-man staff, has been pulling his weight as best he could under the circumstances.

Last night Osborn reached his zenith as the A's captured a double-header from Tri-City Braves, 6-0 and 13-7.

He hurled the seven-inning opener.

A Brilliant Performance

He gave the Braves but one hit.

He issued but one walk.

And he faced but 22 batters.

The only blow came in the first inning when Sam Kanelos, the first man up, greeted Osborn with a line single to left centre. There was no other semblance of a hit. Kanelas was erased by a double play and the only other batter to reach base was Bill Eddelstein, who walked in the third.

Not bad for a pitcher who just happened to escape detection when the cut-down came, and a pitcher who is the A's leading moundsman with a season's record of nine wins and eight losses. Not bad!

The payoff punch in Osborn's first shutout in organized baseball came in the very first inning when Gene Thompson dropped a three-run homer over the centre-field wall with Jim Clark and Don Pries riding the hassocks.

A double by Bob Sturgeon, a sacrifice hit, successive singles by Clark and Pries and errors by Eddelstein and Al Spaeter gave the A's their extra three-run cushion in the fifth.

Bill White Finds Range

The nightcap was strictly a rout after the A's unloaded on starter Cy Greenlaw for four runs in the third and followed up with a five-run outpour in the fourth off Greenlaw and his successor Dick Stone.

Bill White, injected back into the line-up in place of Ben Jaffey, sidelined with a tonsil ailment, discharged the shot that sunk the Braves. White, second man to face Stone, hit the first ball pitched out of the enclosure with the bases loaded.

In all White accounted for seven runs, driving in six and scoring one. Jim Hedgecock coasted to the win—his 10th.

One of the features of the double bill witnessed by a healthy house of 2,000 was the affinity Clark showed for reaching base.

The Johnny-come-lately shortstop of the A's garnered five hits in seven trips and reached base nine times in 10 plate appearances.

The double victory lifted the A's out of the near solitude of seventh place and to within a half game of the fifth-place Braves, whom they meet today in the usual split twin bill.

Ron Smith Gives Caps Loop Lead Once More

A late-season purchase proved a hot buy last night for Vancouver Capilanos.

Ron Smith, recently acquired from Victoria Athletics, laid down a squeeze bunt in the bottom of the 11th inning to give Caps a 1-0 victory over Yakima Bears and first place in the Western International League.

Almost as good, Smith threw a dazzling five-hitter. Bill Brenner, the Yakima manager, gave up nine hits and was mowing them down almost as well as Smith until the 11th.

The Caps went half a game ahead of the pack when their lead rivals, Spokane Indians, dropped a 7-6 decision to Tacoma Tigers. The lead changed hands six times.

On the OUTDOOR FRONT

By ROY THORSEN

The spoiling effects a power damming project would have on Strathcona Park's beautiful Buttle Lake was pictured by Geoff Edgelow, chairman of the tourist trade group of the Chamber of Commerce before a large meeting of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association this week.

Edgelow told his attentive audience that some years before the first war a road was completed to the lake by the government at a cost of $60,000. At that time the lake was used extensively as there were boats and other facilities for fishermen. Through the years, the road, or trail, became impassable due to logging operators not clearing up debris left in their wake.

Thorsen

"The lake is some 18 miles long, ranging from a half to one mile in width. About 13 streams run into the lake which has several large beaches," the tourist group chief said.

The speaker also pointed out that the all-important spawning grounds so necessary in the self-maintenance of fish life would be destroyed.

"Although it is agreed by all that power is a required necessity and development is a merit of progress, every avenue of obtaining water supply should be thoroughly investigated before the damming of Buttle Lake," he said.

Alternate Proposal Suggested

Edgelow suggested as an alternative to mooted project the construction of two dams, one at logging-devastated Upper Campbell Lake and a small one at Buttle, but the latter not to raise the lake above its present high-water mark.

He thought that Strathcona Park should be classed as a class "A" park.

After the speaker had been thanked by President Ray Ritchie, the dam issue was thrown open for discussion, becoming quite heated at times.

Bird hunters who have been making a survey of the blue grouse situation in the Campbell River and Cowichan areas have brought back encouraging reports of healthy coveys of eight and nine birds, Roger Monteith reports. Hunters are keeping their fingers crossed a forest closure won't be imposed this fall to spoil their holiday-hunting plans.

A little white 6 or 8 bucktail fly is netting anglers bass off the breakwater these evenings at dusk.

Big bluebacks are running off Sidney Spit. They go seven to nine pounds. Gordon Laird of the Albany Hotel and hotel guests have been doing well lately with No. 2 pearl wobblers.

Comox Harbor Yields Huge Tyees

Sea fishing off Courtenay-Comox still gets top billing for the land. Many more 40-50 pound tyees are being taken, especially in Comox Harbor. There are quite a lot of blues around, too. Best fishing waters are off Bates and Kitty Coleman Beaches and Little River.

All indications point to a big fishing year for Cowichan Bay.

With the 10-week derby just in its third week, 50 of the 100 rungs have salmon entries, including 29 of 20 pounds up to Duncan's Fred Smith's 35 lb. 5 oz. top ladder specimen. Halberg was just about ready to put up a wad of dough on a wager that by the time all rungs are filled there won't be a fish weighing less than 18 or 19 pounds.

Cash prize winners in the Cowichan derby from July 26 to July 31, were: I. Vangel, Duncan, 24 lb 14 oz., $5; Don Campbell, Cowichan Bay, 31 lb., $5; Ronnie Kaatz, Mill Bay, 25 lb. 4¼ oz., $10; Mrs. C. Bell, Duncan, 22 lb. 6 oz., $10; Fred Smith, Duncan, 35 lb. 5 oz., $10; George Rendall, Cowichan Bay, 25 lb. 5 oz., $5, and Jack Davis, Lake Cowichan, 27 lb. 13½ oz., $5.

Shooting action on the outdoor front tomorrow will be at the Victoria Gun Club ranges off Albert Head Road. It is a practise shoot starting at 1 with prizes.

Sidney Gun Club will hold its annual big prize shoot on the Beacon Avenue trap ranges, Aug. 12. It will be an all-day shoot.

Stan Williams tells us Andy Anderson got a two-in-one catch last Sunday in Sansum Narrows. His plug caught a dog fish and a salmon simultaneously on separate hooks. The Anderson party caught seven springs.

YANKS LOSE TO BROWNS; LEAD PARED

Only Half-Game Separates 3 Clubs

Thanks to rookie Jim McDonald, a former Red Sox player now working for the last-place St. Louis Browns, Boston and Cleveland are only a half game behind New York Yankees in the American Yeague pennant race.

McDonald manhandled the Yanks 10-2 yesterday in the second game of a doubleheader after Vic Raschi notched victory No. 16 in New York's 8-4 opening conquest.

Maury McDermott, lanky lefty, took full advantage of New York's lapse by driving home four runs while pitching the Red Sox to a 5-2 night triumph over Detroit. And Cleveland kept step in a second-place tie by rallying in the eighth to nip Philadelphia A's 3-2.

Ed Stewart and Orestes Minoso with three hits each led the rebounding Chicago White Sox to a 7-4 victory at Washington. The result left the Sox five and a half games off the Yankee pace.

DODGERS, GIANTS LOSE

Brooklyn held its 10-game lead in the National although the Dodgers lost a 5-4 decision in 14 innings at Cincinnati to iron-man Willie Ramsdell. Following the pattern of the 1951 season, the second-place New York Giants also fell 5-4 at St. Louis.

The Phillies, 14½ games out of first place, closed a little ground by edging Pittsburgh 5-4 for Robin Robert's 14th victory.

Freak Windup Makes Ruth No. 1 Hurler

It all started about three years ago out at Sidney.

Ruth Oster was pitching for Red's Service softball team, coached by Wally Yeamans, against the local Sidney club. In one of the early innings Ruth tried out a new windup that she had never before used, seen or heard of.

She wound her arm back slowly in one direction and then, without breaking motion—and that is the key to the pitch—she whipped her arm around in the opposite direction. Actually the windup is half a circle in one direction and a full circle in the opposite direction in one smooth flowing motion.

The windup completely baffled the Sidney batters who were too amazed to attempt a cut at the blazing fastball that was the result of the corkscrew delivery.

After she had been tossing the pitch for several innings, Yeamans asked Ruth where she had discovered it. "I don't know," said Ruth, "But I'm not going to use it any more, it must look awfully silly."

After the game when Yeamans informed Ruth that she had tossed a one-hitter, he managed to talk her out of the notion that the pitch "looked awfully silly," and convinced her that it was the best pitch she had.

PERFECT RECORD MARRED

The result is that Ruth is now the top woman softball pitcher in the city. Pitching for Individuals of the Senior Women's League this year Ruth had won 10 games without a loss going into the playoffs. In the initial game of the finals she suffered her first loss as Moose Ramblers beat the Viduals 6-4. Ruth gave up only six hits, struck out nine and walked one. Five errors by her team were responsible for the loss.

She saw action in the second game of the finals, won by Ramblers 4-3. Coming in in the second inning with her club trailing 4-0, she pitched a one-hit shutout over the remainder of the game.

COACH GETS PRAISE

Ruth gives all the credit for her phenomenal success to Yeamans, her coach. When she had nothing but a wild fastball it was Wally who spent hours teaching her the pinpoint control that makes her such a tough pitcher to face.

A constant companion at all the games is Ruth's four-year-old daughter, Nancy. A southpaw just like her mother, Nancy picks up a big mitt and warms up before every game trying to emulate the windup that has made her mother famous.

PORTLAND MISS STARRY

Upsets Mark Regatta

KELOWNA (CP) — Second-day pool events at the 45th annual Kelowna Regatta Friday were spiced with upsets in the senior women's bracket as 17-year-old Sally Becker of Portland Aero Club, flashy in sprints and long distances, took over leadership in aggregate honors.

Pretty Kay McNamee of Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club, pre-regatta favorite, lost three of the four events she entered, winning only the 200-yard freestyle, and just edging Miss Becker to do it.

Besides capturing the open half-mile, Sally made a convincing triumph in the 150 medley swim and placed second in two events, one of them the 200 freestyle won by Miss McNamee.

Brother Gerry McNamee raced true to form, copping three victories and grabbing a big lead in senior men's honors.

Indians Stay Clean; Trounce Native Sons

Incredible but true, the North Shore Indians went through an entire Inter-City lacrosse game last night without drawing a single penalty. By keeping their men on the floor they had an easy time whipping the last place Nanaimo Native Sons 18-8.

The Sons opened the scoring on Harry Irwin's goal but the Indians ran wild to pump in 10 straight markers without a reply from the Sons. Behind 12-2 at the end of the half, the Sons rapped in five goals in the third period for their biggest spurt.

With the Sons doing little checking, the Indians got away 56 shots. Fred Fulla turned in his usual strong game in goal and stopped 38 of the shots.

The Indians are now in fourth place, four points behind Vancouver Combines. As the standings are now, the Indians will face Victoria Shamrocks in the semifinal.

Tennis Up-Swing--In Vancouver

By BOB HUTCHISON

Victoria Lawn Tennis Club officials were smacking their lips and gloating yesterday afternoon and it wasn't over their afternoon tea.

For the second year in a row the B.C. men's singles championship title match would have a Canadian athlete vieing for the honors. Twenty-year-old Paul Willey will carry the torch for Canada when he meets top-seeded Merwin Miller this afternoon.

The national significance of Willey's victory in the semi-finals was the big thing. For 27 years the B.C. championships went without a Canadian titlist. Then in 1950 Vancouver's sensational Lorne Main came along to bring the annual tourney out of the doldrums for Canada.

Main's victory was treated by many last year with pessimism. He was only one star among a lot of inferior players, they said. After yesterday's semifinals, when two Canadian were playing, these same pessimists had to admit that Canadian tennis was on the upswing, no matter who wins today's title match.

The only discouragement for Victorians is the fact that the improvement is taking place in Vancouver, one of the hottest tennis centres in Canada today.

But one bright spot shone through the local clouds, in the junior ladies' play there were two Victoria girls, Val Speed and Sally Pollard, playing off for the championship. Both are in their early teens and may signify a tennis revival among the youngsters of the city.

Unfortunately for the city club, four of its top junior men are away on survey crews for the summer, just when they ought to be perfecting their game. Local officials have great hopes for the foursome which includes Ted Horsey, Cecil Branson, Ronny Birch and Blaine Coulcher.

PARKS PROGRAM

The sudden surge of tennis greats from Vancouver comes as the result of a city-wide parks program begun on the mainland almost 10 years ago, locals say.

They point to the many public courts in Stanley Park and other spots in Vancouver and then parallel them to the mere six in Victoria.

It is on the public courts that the young future stars first get the feel of a tennis racket. If there are no free courts they seldom learn to play. It is only on the public playing surfaces that the local tennis club will be able to pick out the prospects and bring them along.

The crying need for courts in Victoria should be rectified as quickly as possible, tennis enthusiasts agree.

"If we could only have as many courts at Beacon Hill as they have at Stanley Park we might some day be able to have a Victoria boy in the B.C. finals," one official said. One can't help hoping the city parks board will agree with him in the near future.

Five Arrests In Montreal End Dope Ring

MONTREAL (CP)—A narcotics ring, said by police to be linked with the international dope ring allegedly headed by the notorious Lucky Luciano, today is smashed, R.C.M.P. said, with the arrest last night of five of the principals.

Two other arrests are expected.

Police identified those arrested as Diodato Mastracchio, alias Dulude, 35-year-old owner and operator of a restaurant here, and described as "the big shot we've been trying to get for a long time"; Jimmy Soccio, 35, co-owner of a cafe; Johnny Sulivan, 38, a barman at Mastracchio's restaurant; Cecil (Red) Chesso, 40, a carnival worker, and Emile (Jack) Nadeau, 40, of Montreal.

All five were to be arraigned today on charges of possession, sale and conspiracy to obtain narcatics.

CAUGHT IN ACT

Police said the break in the case came when Socco was arrested while driving in a taxi in the east end of the city. He was taken into custody, police said, while on his way to make a $20,000 delivery of heroin.

Superintendent James R. Lemieux, head of the criminal investigation branch, said identity of the ring members became known to police nearly two years ago when R.C.M.P. raided a rooming house and arrested Johnny Young, a Montreal wrestler. Young now is serving a life term as an habitual criminal.

An R.C.M.P. official said investigation had covered international smuggling activities between the United States and Canada. He gave credit to the close collaboration between Canadian and American agents.

Police said the drug seizure, although valued at only $5,000 on the wholesale drug market, was worth four times that amount on the illicit drug market.

COMMON RIFLE STILL POSES BIG PROBLEM

Arms Conference Fails To Reach Any Agreement; N.A.T.O. Takes Up Matter

OTTAWA (CP)—The question of a common rifle for the Atlantic Treaty's big four was still unresolved today after a two-day arms meeting on the ministerial level in Washington.

But, nevertheless, Defense Minister Claxton termed the Washington talks "in every way a satisfactory conference." He said views were "expressed on the difficult problem with great frankness and in a spirit of co-operation."

It was Mr. Claxton himself who suggested the Washington conference among Britain, France, the U.S. and Canada, thus pointing up this country's concern over lack of agreement on a common rifle and small arms ammunition.

The minister arrived back in Ottawa late Friday night, looking tired and armed with an official press release on the Washington proceedings. He took off again today for Camp Shilo, Man., and later a rendezvous with Prime Minister St. Laurent who headed west Friday.

The press release on the Washington conference, the first such meeting on the ministerial level, said that to permit the arming of Atlantic Pact countries as rapidly as possible, the presently-accepted standard ammunition and weapons should be continued in production for some time.

ACTION EXPLAINED

"At the same time it was unanimously agreed that as early as practicable a new round of small arms ammunition should be adopted."

The statement also said that the conference decided to hand the problem over to the standing group of the N.A.T.O. organization. The group will study the matter and make recommendations "which will enable a decision to be reached within the next few months."

Main stumbling block in immediate agreement on a common rifle is the fact that the countries mainly concerned now hold large quantities of their own small arms.

Britain has the .303 and a new sub-calibre .280 weapon. The French weapon is of .295 calibre. The United States Garand rifle is of .300 calibre.

Mr. Claxton has already made it plain that Canada will ship no more British-type arms to Europe, nor import any more Garands from the U.S. until the matter is resolved.

British Car Sales Slump In Dominion

LONDON (CP)—The Financial Times of London today says sales of British-made cars in Canada have slumped so drastically in recent months that manufacturers have been diverting shipments to non-dollar countries.

Tighening of credit facilities through restrictions on instalment buying, imposed by the Canadian government's April budget, is blamed for the fall in demand.

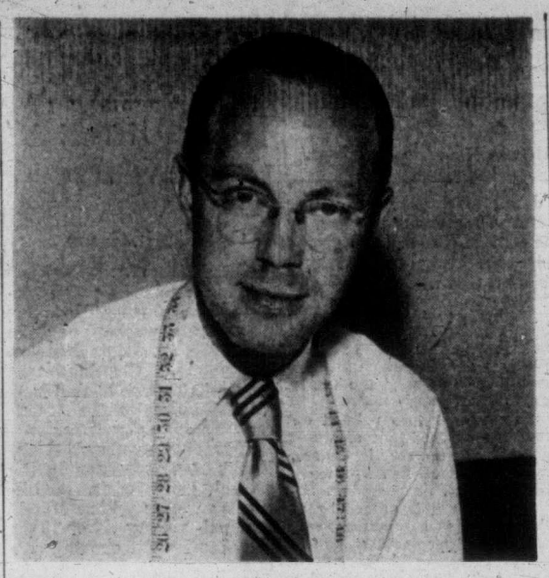
The paper says that in addition to large stocks already held by Canadian dealers, heavy shipments still are lying on the docks awaiting delivery.

"It is certain that the attention of the British government has been drawn to the sharp fall in car sales to Canada," the Financial Times observes. "Such matters would come before the national advisory council for the motor industry, a government body."

Local Woman Named To Hikers' Council

BANFF—Dr. A. "Sandy" Sommerville, of Edmonton, Alta., was elected president of the Skyline Trail Hikers of the Canadian Rockies, at the association's annual meeting which concluded one of the most successful hikes in the Sky Liners' 12 years of history.

Miss C. H. Aylard, of Victoria, was named to the council of the organization.



JOHN ROELOFSEN

NEW VICTORIANS

—by Gwen Cash

It is barely two months since 39-year-old John Roelofsen left The Hague with his wife Hoogewooning (say it quickly and it's musical) and their five children, the eldest eight, the youngest two.

Today he has bought a tailoring business in Victoria. "First I had employment in Vancouver and bought a house there. But it suited me not. So I come to Victoria. Now I look for a house that's big enough for seven."

Cash

I learned from Mr. Roelofsen that tailoring in Holland cannot be self-taught. "You serve a long apprenticeship. Then you must pass examinations." He has three diplomas. "Two for the trade; one for commerce." The one for commerce includes such subjects as bookkeeping and shop management.

"You cannot take your trade (tailoring) examinations," says Mr. Roelofsen, "until you are 21. Requirements for passing include making a man's suit that satisfies the examiner.

Latterly John Roelofsen was an examiner himself and examined about 200 apprentices a year.

Apprenticed when he was 15, he employed 12 tailors in the business he sold shortly before coming to Canada. His father was a tailor before him; as were also his grandfather and great-grandfather.

"Our family has been dealing with the same cloth manufacturers in England for many generations. They will send cloth to me out here too."

Asked why he came to Canada, Mr. Roelofsen said inflation in Holland is such that few people can afford new clothes. "Besides I think it is much better here for my five children. Finer opportunities."

He would like to bring out some of his tailors from The Hague. "But I find there are no houses here to rent, and, at first, they would not be able to buy homes. Besides they have families. Not just one child or two, but families. It is difficult for people with families to find homes. Most houses here have only two bedrooms, yes?"

Mr. Roelofsen speaks French and English as well as his native Dutch, has studied clothes design in Paris, makes women's evening gowns as well as tailleurs, and is in love with Victoria.

"I hope they like me here too, yes?"

Heavy Damage In 3-Alarm Prairie Fire

SASKATOON (CP)—Two business premises were gutted Friday by a $250,000 fire which taxed the Saskatoon fire department to the limit.

The spectacular three-alarm fire, fought by about 70 firemen, raged for two hours through the Winnipeg Paint and Glass Co. and the Canada Egg Products Ltd.

A possible major disaster was averted when firemen confined the blaze to the two buildings. Nearby were two warehouses and an oil company building.

A potential danger was 2,000 gallons of ammonia in the egg plant's cold storage section. Fire doors prevented flames from spreading to it.

The fire was believed to have started in an empty box car standing on a rail siding behind the glass plant.

Flames shot 50 to 60 feet in the air when they reached large quantities of paint stored in the front of the glass company building.

Underground telephone cables in the United Kingdom extend more than 26,000,000 miles, with another 2,000,000 overhead.

Will Go Over Niagara Falls In Craft Named 'The Thing'

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—William (Red) Hill is set to go over Niagara Falls Sunday in a queer-looking contraption of automobile tire tubes and netting.

He said today he isn't worried a bit. In fact, he's so confident he has fixed a time-table.

"I'll be turned loose at five minutes to two, and at five minutes after two they will be hauling me into the pick-up boat," he told an interviewer.

Hill's queer craft, which he calls "The Thing," will be dropped into the water by boat about half a mile above the cataract. It's a cigar-shaped combination ball and barrel made of inflated inner tubes. There are 13 puncture-proof tubes coming to a taper at each end.

Police Are Asked To Trace Man, 80

The city detective office has been asked by D. Anderson, Tilulgrave, Nova Scotia, to help locate his step-brother, James Duncan Anderson, 80, who left home 57 years ago. When last heard from the missing man was doing business in a partnership either in Victoria or Vancouver. Anyone knowing about this man is asked to telephone the detective office, G 4112.

Remand On False Pretences Charge

John Hutcheson, 38, formerly of 160 Cambridge Street, indicated to Magistrate H. C. Hall in city police court Friday that he would plead guilty to the charge of securing a car from Tip Top Auto Sales Ltd. with a $1,500 worthless cheque. Case was remanded to Monday and Magistrate Hall asked for a probation officer's report on Hutcheson.

Who said You can't Afford a Fine Car?

MANY's the man who has paid far more for a fine car than the price of this beauty—and got less than this gay and gallant traveller offers. Sweeping proudly past you, it has a distinction that few cars can equal.

Stepping nimbly away from a stop light, it has the willing surge of power that the very exclusive combination of a Fireball engine and Dynaflow Drive* delivers.

It rides the road with majestic smoothness, and comes to a smooth and gentle halt, in response to the finest brakes that Buick engineers ever developed.

Inside, it has spacious room, from side to side and front to back and seat to roof—plus a softness of cushions and a richness of fabrics which bespeak the custom standards to which it is built.

But don't let that fool you into deciding "It's too rich for me."

If you've looked into 1951 car prices generally, you'll discover this:

You can own a BUICK for little more than an ordinary car will cost—and for several hundred dollars less than the price tags usually found in "the fine-car field."

Why not look into this today?

2. There may be from 2 to 26 men in the game in which Millard Hopper is a champion, but it never muzzes him up. It's (a) draughts; (b) curling; (c) canasta; (d) backgammon?

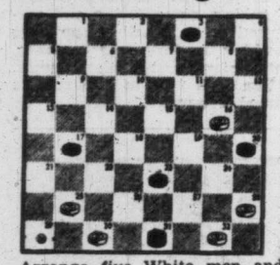
Prefers Her Own Private Pool

"I'm sorry, but this is a private pool and paddling is by invitation only," was the attitude of this little two-year-old, who spent an hour or more paddling round and round in a tiny circle after she found an old bucket on the beach. She thought it was very nice to be able to have her own private bucketful of sea.—(Mirrorpic)

Dotograph For Juniors

An animal which many visitors from cities see for the first time when they visit farms can be made to appear in the drawing above. With a pencil, start at dot 1 and draw a continuous line from dot to dot until 31 is reached. Then color picture appropriately. Possibly you'll be in doubt which color is needed for the hidden animal. Use pink.

A Challenger



Arrange five White men and five Black men (including one king) on a checkerboard as above. Challenge anybody to play the White checkers so that they win the game in just four moves.

White moves first and up.

Solution by Millard Hopper: White moves 23-32 Black jumps 17-26. White moves 28-24 Black goes 26-27. Then you simply move 16-11 and Black must give away his man on 3 and retaken; for he has no other move left.

Bible Enigma

And five in the middle is seen:
The first of all letters, the first of all numbers,
Have taken their stations between;
And if you correctly this medley can spell,
The name of an ancient king it will tell.

Trained observers can identify from airplanes forest oaks infested with oak wilt. The damaging disease usually shows up first in discolored branches near the top.

Water is such an effective absorber of radio waves that radar cannot be used to detect submerged submarines. Radar-waves, which are similar to radio waves, have to reach the object and be reflected from it.

Coal is used in making almost everything. Nylon, sulfa drugs and hundreds of other chemical products are derived from coal.

THE DIVINING TWIG TWITCHES — AND WATER'S BELOW

Water divining is one of the many accomplishments of executive Scout Commissioner Freeman King (see story and other pictures pages 7 and 8). When King located this spring on the Boy Scout camp near Sooke, the pull on the willow forked twig was so strong that it snapped when King tried to resist. Others taking a turn with the divining twig found it hung limply in their grasp. "It isn't everyone that has the art," says King.

At the Roundabout

Our public works department is treating the citizens right, and the tourists. I don't know what material is used to make blacktop highways, and who cares but construction men, but it is a wonderful thing to know we have hundreds of miles of this perfect type of road surface winding over and around stately snow-capped mountains, along magnificent rivers and beside lakes that look like placid inland seas.

This is back from vacation chatter as you will gather, crowding some of the Cariboo, Hope, Princeton, Penticton and another Vancouver Island gypsy tour in the short space of two weeks.

It prompts some advice.

See Vancouver Island first, then British Columbia, the rest of Canada next, and leave California and trips further afield until later.

Neighboring U.S. states used to get the nod because you could bowl along over wide, safe, well-constructed highways.

The well-banked Island Highway has taken every possible hazard out of driving and island resort owners have no more complaints from U.S. tourists comparing B.C. roads with their own.

The new blacktop highway has made everybody happy.

Just one suggestion: They could lead right to and along Buttle, Sproat and Campbell Lakes, and then cut through to the west coast, bringing the open Pacific and romantic Long Beach on the standard lane of travel . . . then nobody would ever want to leave the island at all, in spite of the pull of the Cariboo country, its rivers and lakes.

It doesn't seem so many years ago since motorists who had been over the Cariboo road were interviewed and greeted as adventurers who had braved dangers associated with pioneers. They would put a big buffalo emblem of the Cariboo on their cars. They were as proud of it as the airman is of his caterpillar badge, which proves he has been forced to bail out of a plane.

Now the Canyon Road and the Hope-Princeton Road are ones anyone can take without hesitation in any ordinary car. We met a couple over 70 years old traveling along in an A Model Ford as happy and fearless as a pair of kids. They had made the trip more than a dozen times.

In those little mountain-plateau towns like Hope one feels in a different world and that in such a setting one is apart from the trials, tribulations, turmoil and threats the rest of the world lives under.

No doubt at any of these places, if there were talk of wrecking one of their magnificent lakes like there is of wrecking Buttle Lake, there would be open warfare immediately.

Incidentally, tourist camp accommodation is good most anywhere on the island or the mainland; prices a little lower on the mainland both for meals and accommodation.

Most camps are modern in every way.

Chic Sales wouldn't get material at any of them to write another book. Nearly all of them have showers that are as welcome as a million dollars after a hot day's driving.

Travelling people, always friendly, seem friendlier than ever. We found we had a flat tire one day at an auto court. I had hardly got the trunk open to get tools before two people got out of an Oklahoma car and another couple from a B.C. car with a call, "Can we give you a hand?"

Tom Merriman

Maybe This Kind Of Piping Would Settle Controversy In Victoria

By DON INGHAM

When Yugoslav piper Rade Milosavljevic, above, entertained some of his countrywomen with a tune on his gajde during the Eisteddfod at Llangollen, Denbighshire, he was merely raising one small voice from the hundreds who lay claim to originating the lordly pipes.

The gajde is similar to the Gaelic machine, but is worked by means of bellows rather than combined lung and arm power, and the music finds its way out the spout at the front. Otherwise it is the same instrument that must have originated at the same time in countless countries, according to the claims made.

The early English had bagpipes before bulldogs. Bretons had their "bignou," the Greeks and Romans coaxed melodies from a thing called an ascaulus, and Neopolitans tooted the surdelina.

But despite all the efforts made by other nations to get into the act, the doughty Scots — Cpl. Timmy Killeen of the U.S. Marine Corps would start a three-day riot if he were to read this—have made the weird and wonderful weapon their own.

The way they did it was similar to the adoption of the Scotch joke. Legend has it that deep in a quiet district of Aberdeen is a factory where Scotch jokes are shipped to all parts of the world, brought back for modernizing, and shipped out again.

(That savors of the fellow who said to a reporter, "I don't care what you say about me in the paper as long as you say something." The canny Scot would frown at being considered plenty publicity wise, "but a wee bit o' fun poked at our-r-r-selves can dee nae har-r-rm, and may dee a muckle guid, lad, if ye ken.")

Ye ken. The Scots dressed the pipes in a tartan, played them all over the world, and squashed the opposition by sheer energy and devotion. But it doesn't stop others from trying.

For instance, the aforementioned Timmy Killeen. Timmy is a well-decorated veteran of the Second World War and Korean campaign from the Irish town of Queens, known to the ignoranti as one of the five boroughs of New York City.

"He would rather lose his Irish bagpipes than miss a St. Patrick's Day parade, and has led the Knights of Columbus on many a sortie. And as far as the Scottish claims are concerned he ignores them. As he stated in print some weeks ago, ever since Brian Boru defeated the Danes at Clontarf 1,000 years back the bagpipes have been the Irish soldier's inspiration, and "Scots? Who are they?"

Jaromir Weinberger, Bohemian composer now living in the United States, made a noble effort to give the pipes a home in Czeckoslovakia with his opera "Schwanda Der Dudelsackpfeifer" (the Times will gladly translate the title if anyone requires it), but the pipes still come from north of the border.

There has been a Jewish bagpiping champion, the Chinese use the same five-note scale as the Scots, and now Gurkhas are thinking of adding the pipes to some of their famous fighting units.

The fight has been going on for thousands of years, and will likely go on for another thousand. By that time the opposition should be worn down to the point where all nations sport the kilt, and warfare will be limited to tossing the caber and highland dancing.

Ottawa Housecleaning

Last month the philatelic branch at Ottawa suddenly removed from sale over a dozen varieties of stamps. Here is a list of the items no longer available:

1942 War Issue—8c, 50c, 16c and 17c Air Special Delivery, 7c Air, 10c Special Delivery, 1c green coil perf. 9½. In the Officials the 1c O.H.M.S. is also sold out.

This drastic purge cleans out most of the obsolete issues, and wil probably catch many dealers in short supply, for up until now stamps have only been dropped from the list as stocks became exhausted. But in this case the department admits that the stamps were deliberately taken off sale, for an official has publicly announced that the move was in the nature of a "housecleaning."

Collectors will be wondering what happened to the deleted items. Were they destroyed, sold to a dealer, or distributed to post offices across the country to be used up in the ordinary way? (The latter course was taken to use up a surplus of 5c Newfoundland stamps recently.)

PRICE WILL RISE

Most of the discontinued stamps will show a rise in price and will probably be selling at double face within a year. It is hard to pick a winner, but the 50c War will probably be a good stamp. Dealers would not stock it to any extent while still available at Ottawa on account of its high face value, and its sudden disappearance was quite unexpected. The two air mail-special delivery stamps should also turn out well, for they were not popular with the public and were difficult to get in used condition even while current. In fact, one wonders how they have been on sale at the philatelic branch for as long as they have.

It would be as well to fill in any missing items in your collection that are still left on the list, especially the $1 Destroyer, for mint high values generally turn out well.

Probably the department wants to make room for the new issues which are now appearing. The new 2c in green instead of brown is already on sale, and the other color changes mentioned in a recent article may have followed suit by the time these notes are in print. Then there are the special stamps for the centenary in September, which will be followed by an issue to mark the Royal visit the following month.

STEPHEN SCHOFIELD

By STEPHEN SCHOFIELD

Traveling Canadian editor who is touring Britain on a bicycle as he writes articles for Victorian Sunday Times meets friend of R.C.A.F. days at Stevenage, Herts.

I liked Danny at school. Everybody did. As a scholar he was slow. Who cared. We liked him because he was nice and unafraid, and his smile so engaging.

Once, he drove four of us 10 miles on a dirt road in just under 11 minutes. Scared? I? Yes. Dan? No.

Once, when the ice floes came floating down the river, we jumped from one to another, and all fell in sooner or later—except Dan.

Once, in R.C.A.F. uniform, he drove down Granville Street in Vancouver at nearly 70 m.p.h. at 2 o'clock in the morning, and had his license taken away.

He excelled as a runner and football player. He had balance and timing. He used these later and used them well—in the Battle of Britain.

As a squadron leader, in the air at high speed and under fire, he was ever cool and poised, quietly giving orders to the pilots on the wing.

Fast, cool, poised. That was Dan. He came through unscathed and married an English girl, and now lives here near Stevenage.

They have one son, a healthy infant of about eight months. On Saturday afternoon Dan took me alone for a drive around the country.

What do you think he talked about? School? Women? War? Not for a minute.

He talked about Pablum, diapers, safety pins; the nourishing quality of orange extract, the advantages of breast feeding, the proper and improper temperatures for the bathing of babies—for an hour and a half. Nothing else.

A great fighter pilot and crack athlete — now bubbling about Pablum, diapers, safety pins! Can you tie it? Unquestionably Dan is the most married man I know.

INCREDIBLE WALCOTT WINS TITLE ON BORROWED TIME

Oldest Champ Traveled The Rockiest Road

At an admitted 37, and after 21 years, Cream—ring name Jersey Joe Walcott — is their heavyweight champion and that of the entire world. Some say he is 41. There is no birth certificate.

CHARLES

There may have been more exciting fight stories than the Walcott dropping of 30-year-old Ezzard Charles flat on his face in Pittsburgh, but none with more human interest.

Walcott, the oldest champion in history, has been on borrowed time since coming back in January of 1945 after having retired for the sixth time and being on the sideline for three and a half years.

The story of Walcott is the old heartbreak of boxing. There's never been a Cinderella story like it. Jersey Joe hit rock bottom so hard and long he almost dropped clear through. The blackest moment, he remembers, came one day in 1936.

"I broke my arm, couldn't work because of it," he recalls. "There was no relief money. I couldn't have gone any further down, even if I pulled the stopper."

Walcott wasn't just talking when he spoke these words into the microphone from the Forbes Field battlepit after knocking out Charles in the seventh:

"I want to thank God for helping me to win. I always said that if God's on your side, you're bound to win sooner or later.

"I want to be a worthy champion, and try to do help the youth of this country. I want to visit every church and Sunday school where they want me and tell the young folks what it means to have God on your side."

This was not idle chatter. Camden county officials will tell you Jersey Joe has spent much time helping combat juvenile delinquency, speaking to groups of youngsters in schools, at playgrounds and meeting places.

Praver to the deeply-religious Walcott means sitting down and talking things over with God. Recalling how he felt before a highly-important meeting with Jimmy Bivins in Cleveland, Feb. 25, 1946, he says:

"Bivins' dressing room was next to mine. All the time before the fight, he had a record player going with loud jump numbers, and he was singing and jumping. The minutes before a fight are for prayer and for planning the fight, and here was a guy jigging around with jive."

Walcott doesn't smoke, and his favorite and strongest drink are the milk shakes he and his brother-in-law and pal, Joe Homes, get at a certain spot on New Jersey's Black Horse Pike. His wildest "play boy" habits are movies, blues records and a card game peculiar to Camden, known as "sixty-one" or "outhouse rummy."

Walcott began his ring career at 16 as a middleweight. Jack Blackburn, the one-time great lightweight, had him for a brief spell before being called away to develop Joe Louis.

Jersey Joe stricken with typhoid, was ill a full year. He married, and family financial worries left no time for training. He went into fights with no more preparation than a hair comb. He went as far as he could before keeling over from sheer exhaustion.

In June, 1941, Walcott hung up his gloves for what he believed was for good. There were five little Walcotts then, and he couldn't feed them on the peanuts he got for taking pastings.

But along came James J. Johnston, one of the superior managers, and he convinced him that he could work in a defense plant and still fight. Joe's license had run out during his retirement, and he applied for a new one. New Jeresy Boxing Commissioner John Hall had seen Wtalcott box several times when Jersey Joe obviously was not in his best condition. He insisted that Walcott undergo a complete physical examination.

Johnston lost interest, however, and Walcott's only appearances from June 27, 1941, to Jan. 11, 1945, were two inconsequential matches in tiny Batesville, N.J.

Walcott applied for a post on the Pennsaugen Township police force. He landed a job in the Camden shipyards. Some weeks the pay was as high as $90.

Blast Out Of Traps By Hitting Through Sand, Not Just Into It

By ELLSWORTH VINES
Tournament Star

Perhaps the most common hazard is the sand trap.

If the trap is far from the green, naturally it is better to hit the ball if possible to get the greatest distance, but the first objective is to get the ball out of the trap.

Swing through the sand, not just into it.

But, of course, distance requires more power.

No matter what the distance, woods should rarely be used in traps, then only by an expert.

Chipping also is a poor way to hit the green from a trap, as a chip shot requires roll and becomes very hard to control when shot from sand.

Every course has hazards, but the toughest bunker is the one every golfer carries in his head—the mental attitude which says this or that shot is too tough.

If you think you are going to fail, you're a cinch to do just that.

Increase your pleasure while reducing your handicap and the size of your ulcer by applying the simplest fundamentals of the swing.

JOBS IN BREWERIES MAKE MARQUETTE MEN FEEL STRONG

Marquette's football squad should be feeling good, one way or another, by the time practise starts, Sept. 6.

While 30 players are spending the summer in such muscle-building jobs as brick-laying, plumbing, carpentering and construction, a small group are working in insurance agencies, retail stores and at playgrounds.

CANASTA — JACOBY

Solving Wild Card Problems

By OSWALD JACOBY

Questions have been piling up for some time, now, so we'd better clear up a few of them. The new rules about the number of wild cards in a canasta seem to puzzle quite a good many players. Perhaps my answers will straighten them out.

Q. Are you ever allowed to have more than three wild cards in a canasta?

A. Never. Three wild cards is the limit.

• • •

Q. My side had two canastas but no other melds. I was down to one card, and drew a wild card from the stock. Can I add it to one of my canastas and meld out? Each canasta had three wild cards in it already.

A. You are not allowed to add the wild card to either canasta—as long as each canasta already contained three wild cards. You must simply keep on playing.

• • •

Q. Does a player have the right to open a closed canasta of either side to determine the number of wild cards in it and whether they are deuces or jokers?

A. You may inspect a canasta only at three times. First, you may open it up at the time it is completed. For example, suppose your partner makes the canasta. You may open it up during the turn on which he completes it, and even during the next player's turn. Once the next player has discarded, it is too late to open up the canasta and inspect it.

Second, you may open up a closed canasta if somebody tries to add a wild card to it. The purpose of the inspection is to make sure that it does not already contain the limit of three wild cards.

Third, you may open a closed canasta at the end of a hand—to count it up for the score.

However, you never open a closed canasta just to see whether the wild cards in it are deuces or jokers.

• • •

Q. My side needed 120 points for the initial meld. I put down three deuces and six kings. My opponents objected to the nine-card canasta. Was it a legal meld?

A. Yes. There is no objection to a nine-card canasta, as long as it contains no more than three wild cards. It's an unusual play, and perhaps not very wise, but it's quite legal.

★ Teen-Age Artists Combine to Paint Murals ★

By JIM McKEACHIE

Victoria and one of its schools is receiving favorable publicity at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. On display is a mural painted by students of Tolmie Elementary School which was in the top 15 of 500 entries in a contest staged by the C.N.E. This story gives background of how the pupils turned it out, plus some interesting thoughts on art in our schools by a teacher.

Students of the city which considers itself a tourist mecca, and the most desirable place to live comfortably in the Dominion, found it natural to depict a mural for the Canadian National Exhibition's contest, "This Is Where I Live."

Victoria—with its wealth of natural scenery and well-known man-made landmarks — proved little problem for the students of Tolmie Elementary School, for representative subjects were all around.

The grade seven art class of Montreal-born Hugh R. Mooney soon had 18 scenes listed on a blackboard for possible use in a mural for entry in the nation-wide competition.

Soon the list was cut in half, and the 12 and 13-year-olds, under the watchful guidance of their 36-year-old instructor, began the task of transforming it into a colorful representative depiction of the place where they live.

Ten pupils of a class of 35—seven of them boys—studied the scenes, sketched them onto a big sheet of brown wrapping paper measuring two and one-half by eight feet—the actual size of the mural.

HONORABLE MENTION

Then they traced the composite drawing onto insulation board and turned out the finished work which received honorable mention in the C.N.E. competition, ranking in the top 15 of 500 entries.

The scenes—a totem pole, snow-covered Mount Baker, sailboats, birds, steamships to symbolize Victoria's location on Vancouver Island, a part-border of dogwood, B.C.'s official emblem, and the famous Victoria Causeway—with the Empress Hotel on one side and the city's picturesque inner harbor with the provincial legislative buildings on the other, blended into a scene representing B.C.'s capital city.

The students were enthusiastic about the project from the time Mr. Mooney suggested it in class. Already two of them, Lewis Hilton and Marjorie Swain, had won prizes in the local contest for "Clean-Up, Paint-Up Week" posters.

Though the 10 most apt pupils in drawing and painting were chosen to do the work in flat oils, others in the class contributed by building and painting a frame for the insulation board upon which the mural was painted.

But it was not all easy going, for the young artists had only four weeks to complete the work and get it to Toronto.

They worked before school in the morning, during lunch hours, after school and in regular art periods.

ENTHUSIASTIC TEACHER

It's not strange to understand how the youngsters became so enthused. In Mr. Mooney they have an instructor who left his profession as a commercial artist and sign painter to achieve a life-long ambition to become a teacher.

It is a tribute to his work that his class did so well, for he has only been teaching four and one-half years, having gone in for the work after getting his discharge from the R.C.A.F. (He was a navigator, flew many missions over Europe, wears a caterpillar emblem indicating he bailed out to save his life.)

His ambition achieved, the dark-complexioned instructor hasn't let up one bit. He plans to take a course in art towards his B.A. degree at the University of Washington as soon as possible.

"No two days are alike, no two children are alike," is the way he explains his continued interest in his job.

"Normally, only about 10 per cent of a class shows artistic leanings, but of that 10 per cent very few ever carry it further—they don't get enough encouragement," Mr. Mooney observed.

The 10 who actually did the mural—Judith Rolls, Monty Brinkman, Lewis Hilton, Garth Millar, Donald Deacon, Loreen Gustas, Richard Hall, Raymond Silcock and Marjorie Swain—showed the most definite signs of artistic talent.

During painting of the Mount Baker part of the scene, the pupils thought it would be just the thing to put in a mammoth cherry atop the ice cream cone-like volcanic crest of the snow-covered mountain. They thought it might be symbolic in some way or other—but the symbolism was clear only to the young 'teen-agers and Mr. Mooney dissuaded them.

"Shows they're thinking, though," he laughed.

Reactions? There were plenty when he announced in class the mural had won a prize.

"They were pleased as punch—they all let out a great shout when I told them. I'm still happy about it, for it has given the students a real lift and done a great deal to stimulate their interest in art," the teacher said.

He noted that his experience has been that B.C. does more to encourage development of pupils with artistic leanings than some provinces. (Mr. Mooney was educated in Vancouver, took teacher training courses in Fredericton, N.B., after the war, taught at Plaster Rock, N.B., for two and a half years.)

TRUSTEES CO-OPERATIVE

"The art program here is well developed. The Victoria School Board, especially, has been most co-operative, as have inspector John Gough and school principal D. R. MacKay.

He's happy with his bevy of artistically-inclined pupils, points to the fact Tolmie School will be one of the few in Victoria in a year's time to have special art facilities.

"Most teachers in Canada have to work under a terrible handicap. It is difficult to give proper instruction in art at ordinary desks in ordinary classrooms," he said.

He added he has had a great deal of success in teaching perspective to art students—a fact which is reflected in the "This Is Where I Live" mural by the totem pole angling back into the scene, the ship coming over the horizon and the converging lines to depict the Causeway and its sidewalks.

FOURTEEN ENTRIES

What is Mr. Mooney's secret in developing young artists in the modern-day community where there are so many distractions to take adolescent minds off such topics?

"One thing that gets them off to a good start is that I try to get over to them the discipline of sign painting. The rigid rules of this type of work—which can be applied at school to posters, make for better draughtsmanship. That's the basis of my teaching," he explained.

Demonstration Records Led To Fame

The Brill Building on Broadway is about as near as one can come to locating that intangible called Tin Pan Alley. The place is overrun with song publishers' offices.

The sidewalk in front is usually full of lyric writers, melody men and musicians in general, talking shop. A little over a year ago one of the crowd was a kid named Guy Madison, who said he was a singer.

"I picked up bread-and-butter money there," Madison explained. "You see, I used to make demonstration records for song writers. I'd wait around there in my outdoor office to be hired. I'd get two to five bucks a disk. Not enough to get rich on, but enough to keep my stomach quiet. The writers would play the records for publishers, trying to get them interested in their new songs."

POPULAR NOW

These days, Madison doesn't have to hang around in front of the Brill Building. The publishers in the place are only too happy if he decides to sing one of their new numbers, because in a year's time Madison has become the "hottest" new male vocalist in the business.

Quarrels, Fights, Drama Marked Early Days of B.C. Legislature When Lieutenant Governor McInnis Made Unpopular Choice Of Premier

By N. de BERTRAND LUGRIN
(Author of "Pioneer Women of Vancouver Island")

When an old lady was telling me her story (she is gone now but her family's name will be perpetuated in the history of British Columbia) she dwelt nostalgically on the early days of Parliament in Victoria when as she said, no member received any emolument, but considered it reward enough to serve his constituency, and an honor to represent it.

That must have been when the Legislature was housed in the funny little buildings known jocularly as "Birdcages." They gave their name, I understand, to "Birdcage Walk." What a pity that name could not have been perpetuated in the old street? It was so very Victorian, and we all liked it. Besides it would be appreciated by the U.S. tourists to whom such a large proportion of our population caters nowadays.

As a matter of fact, the visitors themselves assure us, that the more Victoria clings to the old fashions, the better most of them are pleased.

That is one of the chief reasons they come here, to find something different. Why is it that this is not taken advantage of? Why do we not appreciate that the more we remain true to our old traditions, the more people we attract here. They may smile, even laugh about it. But they love it.

UNIQUE CHARM

The trouble is that there is a wide difference of opinion as to what gives Victoria its unique charm. Many of us realize that it is partly on account of our conservatism, clinging to old manners, old ways of pronouncing the King's English, old gardens, old trees, eccentric little streets which run off at a tangent, every one of which has a story to tell. We would be wise to capitalize on these things, and hold fast to the old order.

We were all very proud of the new Parliament Buildings. They seemed a splendid augury of things to come. Their surroundings were perhaps not quite in keeping with their dignity. The old wooden bridge was still the principal way to James Bay, and the mud flats just as much in evidence.

Then there was the constant reminder of earliest days in the Indian Reserve, with canoes still drawn up on the beach, though most of the natives lived in their villages outside the city, chiefly in Saanich, where they still remain. The picturesque high and wide lodges have nearly all fallen apart now, and the small shacks which replaced them have given way to new dwellings, surprisingly modern and artistic. I don't suppose any of the Indians, even the chiefs, would have dreamed of attending any of the sessions of the House.

IT WAS THE FASHION

But it was quite the fashion for those of us who lived in James Bay especially, and of course many from other parts of the city, not to miss an afternoon in the galleries if we could help it. Largely because one never knew quite what to expect. They were exciting times anyway. Ships coming from and going into the Klondike. Fortunes being won and lost and an administration which was not entirely popular, to put it mildly.

Public feelings mounted higher and higher, and the members of the House were almost irrepressible at time. I can see Capt. John Irving sprawled in his seat, a sardonic grin on his handsome face, as he interrupted whoever it was who was speaking to suggest in a loud voice that the House join in a rollicking song, then well known, "Papa's pants will soon fit Willie."

Everyone knew to whom he referred, and there was unrestrained laughter from the floor of the house in which the galleries joined.

A REAL FIGHT

One day there was a real fight. I do not know just what started it. But it took place during opening prayers. I believe Mr. Joe Martin was responsible, certainly he was the most active. I think he wanted to unseat one of the other members. It was a quite shocking exhibition. Some woman in the gallery shouted, "Shame, shame," and an usher pushed in to rebuke her. But most of us felt she was quite justified.

Then there was the afternoon that a woman sitting in the front row of the ladies' balcony, and who evidently had a grievance against the member who was speaking, turned around to address all of us within earshot. She gave her opinion of the speaker in no uncertain language. They could hear her plainly down below, and all heads turned upwards. However an usher attended to her quietly but firmly.

But the event which stands out more vividly than any other, and which, I understand, is unique in Parliament, took place on March 3, 1900.

It was the prorogation of Parliament, and the galleries were packed, people standing at the back and all tense with anticipation of something out of the ordinary taking place.

NOT POPULAR

Governor McInnis had chosen Hon. Joseph Martin as premier. It was not a popular selection. As soon as the House opened, Mr. Prentice was on his feet to move a resolution to the effect that the members had no confidence in Mr. Martin.

The motion was carried.

Immediately afterward, the bar of the House being removed, his Honor entered, tall, dignified and unhurried, although he must have realized what he had to face. We knew the governor and his family very well. We attended our first ball while they lived at Carey Castle, and lived in his house on Michigan Street for years. He had a kindly way with young people, and could be very entertaining and everyone liked his wife who was hospitable, gentle and retiring.

The governor was a real Scotsman with the courage of his convictions, even though he must have realized that, in carrying them out he was not adding to his popularity. He was a strict teetotaler for one thing, and Government House had never been run on those lines before, nor has it since.

ALL WALKED OUT

No sooner had he entered the chamber, when Mr. Dunsmuir, following a prearrangement, rose to his feet and led the way to the lobbies. As His Honor took his seat, the last member walked out, leaving only Mr. Joe Martin at the foot of the dais to the right, and the secretary, T. R. E. McInnis on the left.

After a long silence, no doubt to gain complete self-control, the Governor began his speech. But he had said only a few words when the galleries, divided in sympathy, began to cheer and hiss. He paused for silence. It was accorded him. He stood bravely defiant, his head high, and no matter what the convictions of the people may have been, all sympathy must have gone out to him in his extremity. He spoke with restraint and dignity, and we held our breath to listen.

When he had finished someone called out, "Three cheers for McInnis," and we joined in, not quite knowing what it was all about, but wanting to encourage him. Outwardly composed, he must have been cut to the heart by the desertion of the House.

SERVICE FOR KING EDWARD VII

Another scene which is indelibly fixed in my memory and which took place outside the Parliament Buildings, was the intercession service for King Edward the VII. That was in June, 1902.

Victoria had been preparing to celebrate his coronation when word was received that he had been operated on for appendicitis, and it was feared he could not recover. As a man he had many faults and while he was Prince of Wales there were stories, probably exaggerated, of his gay doings. But when the Queen died and he became King, all of these things were forgotten. He would be the crowned head of our great Empire, and we all wanted him to recover and take his place on the throne.

It was a lovely June evening. The service began at half-past seven, Victoria was very quiet and looked sombre, for all of the decorations which graced the streets and buildings had been taken down. But the hundreds that crowded the grounds and stood on the steps and on the platform, made a colorful moving picture, and there was the Royal Standard flying on the government flag-staff.

Representatives of all religious organizations were there, the lieutenant-governor and his staff, H.M. naval and military forces, judges, members of parliament, all were on the platform. In front was the choir and the Fifth Regiment Band.

Never had there been a more impressive service, nor the national anthem sung with deeper feeling. Addresses were given by the clergy, interspersed with hymns, including the well-known "Abide With Me" and "Peace, Perfect Peace."

But the most heart-reaching touch of all came at the end of the service when a young Salvation Army lassie in her quiet costume and her bonnet ascended the steps to take her place on the platform. It was twilight now, the afterglow of the whole west a prayerful background, so that I think we all were looking toward it. With her hands clasped in front of her, and her face raised to the sky, she spoke in a clear, musical voice, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills," and finished this most beautiful psalm, while the vast concourse of people stood motionless and silent.

QUIETLY AND REVERENTLY

When shortly afterward the people dispersed to wend their way to Beacon Hill and the Dallas, they went very quietly and reverently. I believe we all wanted to get a clearer view and feel closer to "The hills from whence cometh our help."

That was 51 years ago. Many changes have taken place since, but perhaps the most radical was exemplified during the last session of the House when the first Indian member accompanied by two Indian chiefs in their ceremonial regalia, was welcomed into Parliament.

Weed Tells Time Forecasts Weather

As the summer moves on towards fall native wild flowers are less and less conspicuous except along water courses, by the margins of lakes and bogs, and in the mountains. Not all but many of our flowers at this season are of the kind commonly classed as "weeds." Dandelion and hawkweed, hawkbit and wall lettuce are common examples of these. Some, of course, are with us from early spring and are not unknown in a mild winter. All of them are interesting to a botanist, but the farmer and the gardener look upon them with other eyes and thoughts.

BINDWEED

One of the most troublesome weeds and at the same time one of the handsomest is the larger bindweed or white convolvulus which used to be very conspicuous in some of our vacant lots, trailing over shrubbery and fences, and very difficult to destroy. It is still to be found here and there. The smaller bindweed with pinkish flowers is another persistent weed which seems less common now. It used to be very abundant along Bowker Creek near the crossing of Foul Bay Road and Cadboro Bay Road. Both these plants are, of course, relatives of the garden convolvulus, not so commonly cultivated now, perhaps.

Two small garden weeds these summer days are at once prolific and interesting. One is the petty spurge, whose plants, a few inches high, are among the earliest to come into flower: I have seen their little yellowish green clusters out as early as February 26 in 1948. The bright green ovate leaves growing alternately on the slender stems make the little plants conspicuous, and when the stems are broken a milky juice is seen to exude. This juice has earned the plant the name of wart-weed. The little plants are easily pulled up, but when once they seed there is nothing to do but wait for the new crop.

SCARLET PIMPERNEL

Prettier than the petty spurge is another common garden weed which has also come to us from across the Atlantic: the scarlet pimpernel, which has a well-established place in the folk-lore of Old England. In the days when clocks and watches were rare possessions this little wild flower was valued as a comparatively trustworthy time-keeper, as well as an equally dependable weather prognosticator. The closing of the little red flowers marked the passage of afternoon. They are said to close about two by some authorities, but I find them at this season showing signs of closing about three, standard time. If the flowers are fully expanded in the morning this means to a certainty that there will be no rain of consequence during the day. This responsiveness to weather conditions earned the little plant long ago the names of "poor man's" or "shepherd's weather-glass," and those who know the sudden changes of weather in the Old Land will appreciate the value placed on so small a plant. Meanwhile the scarlet pimpernel spreads its leaves and flowers in every neglected corner. Its flowers are not always red: very rarely they are blue or pale pink, or even white.

Use Garden Hose To Spray Plant Food And Pesticide

There is a growing use of hose water in home gardens for the application of plant food during the growing season; and some gardeners use it to apply insecticide sprays. It performs these tasks with a minimum of work by the gardener, saving many hours of his time.

Whenever plant food is to be applied to a growing plant, it is a problem how to get fertilizer down to the roots. Digging may disturb the roots, and perhaps do more harm than the plant food will do good. But when a soluble plant food is dissolved in water, it is carried down through the soil to take immediate effect.

It has recently been established by experiment, that the leaves of plants will absorb plant food in solution more quickly than the roots, and actually use a higher percentage of the nutrient, making it go farther. So it is actually more efficient to feed plants through the hose water, sprayed by a sprinkler, than to spread it on the ground dry.

Various devices are offered to mix plant food with the hose water. Most satisfactory are siphons which lift the nutrient solution from a pail or tub, and mix it with the water that passes through the hose in a ratio of 16 to 1. It is important that the solution be too weak to burn green leaves; and directions for this are given by the manufacturers of the soluble materials.

Nitrogen is the food element most likely to be needed by growing plants, and by lawns. It is carried away by drainage water and consumed by the plants; so it is likely to be exhausted quickly when rains are frequent and growth vigorous.

Complete soluble plant foods are now offered, which will supply all food elements. Standard dry plant food mixtures contain a high percentage of soluble materials which can be used to form a nutrient solution.

Spraying Hedge With Insecticide Mixed in Hose Water.

To apply insecticides in the hose water requires special applicators, which mix the chemicals with the water in proper proportions for use on the plants. By using the water pressure, pumps are eliminated. Both insecticides and weed killers can be applied with a minimum of work.

Stray Insects Are Menace To House Plants

By CECIL SOLLY

During the past years, much information on the care of house plants has been offered on this page. Simple practices for the care of plants under the uncongenial atmosphere of low humidity and other unnatural conditions have been discussed at reasonable length, in non-technical terms. In consequence of these directions, a fine advance in appreciation of the change in house conditions during the past two decades has been understood. It has also brought numerous questions on the subject of insect-control indoors.

In most instances the plant was apparently in perfect condition when it came from the florist or greenhouse. On a few occasions, even with the utmost care used by the florist, a stray insect egg might have been on the plant or in the soil when it was received. Most frequently however the pests get on the plants after you put them in the house.

They are liable to skip from plants you already have indoors or from cut flowers from your garden. They quite often fly into the house inadvertently when they are in the winged-female stage. Because it is natural for them to find a plant on which to deposit their eggs or soil in which to lay them, they are equipped with a sense which directs them to your plants with unerring instinct.

JUMPERS

When the pot is watered, especially when warm water is used, little insects appear on the soil surface. They jump around for a few minutes and then disappear into the soil again.

If the pot is watered again, immediately, with any good garden insecticide, use the same strength as recommended for spraying roses and the pests will be killed. It is important that the soil be soaked thoroughly with the solution, so that any further occurrence will be nipped in the bud. Since frequent waterings of the pot are likely to thin out the insecticide and lessen its potency, it is advised that an application be made once every two or three months whether the pests are noticed or not.

MEALY BUGS

These pests are found most frequently on such soft-stem plants as Coleus and Begonias. They are rather flat insects and are generally observed tightly ensconced in a joint where leaf stem and branch stem meet. If they are not quickly removed, they are likely to deposit eggs which will later hatch as a fresh infestation. Most gardeners prefer the individual treatment involving the use of a pair of tweezers. Others use a tooth-pick-swab of cotton dipped in medical alcohol. One drop from the saturated cotton is plenty to destroy the insect, but take care not to spill it on the plant.

APHIS

Aphis, or plant lice, feed on the plants by inserting a juice-sucking apparatus through the soft tissues and drawing the sap through this into their bodies. For this reason the insecticide materials called stomach poisons, which would be effective for caterpillars and other chewing insects, are not of much use. The best cure is to use a contact type of insecticide. Any garden spray material that is lasting (not volatile) will do. In summer, the plants are placed out in a shady spot in the garden and thoroughly drenched with the spray. In winter, a good place to apply the drench is in the wash tub.

There is one type of this pest, well named woolly aphis, which has a white, cottony material around it as a protection against its natural enemies.

Poison Ivy? Dig It Out

By HENRY PREE

Fortunately there are few garden plants that are poisonous, and these are dangerous only if eaten.

Who will believe that to nibble the foliage of the stately delphinium and foxglove would necessitate a call for a physician, or that the leaves of rhododendron and mountain laurel can be equally dangerous if taken internally?

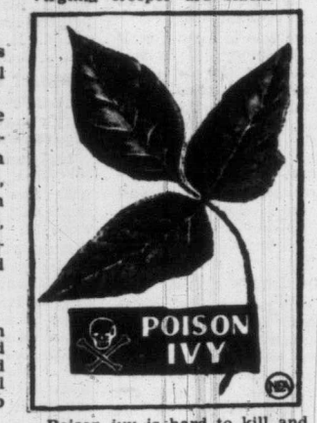
Poison ivy, botanically listed as rhus toxicodendron, is often mistaken for the harmless Virginia creeper, but the latter has five leaves while poison ivy has only three, and they are noticeably shiny. The plants differ also in their fruit, the poison ivy having small white berry-like fruits, while those of the Virginia creeper are black.



Poison ivy is hard to kill and any chemical that will eradicate it will kill nearly everything near it. The surest method is to dig it out, keeping manfully at the job until all the roots—and they run far and wide—are in the fire.

Wear gloves and do not rub your face or bare parts of the body after you have touched the plant. Afterwards wash hands, arms and face thoroughly in strong laundry soap, and to be on the safe side, wash the gloves as well.

Gardening Hints

Tobacco users should not handle tomato plants with unwashed hands. Tobacco mosaic virus persists in the cured leaf and can be carried to a tomato plant on the hands of a smoker. This also applies to eggplant and peppers.

* * *

Do not save the seed of hybrid vegetables, as the second generation seed will not reproduce the variety uniformly. Hybrids are bred from two parent strains and only the first generation has hybrid vigor.

* * *

Like modern architecture, the newer ideas in garden design are functional. First consider the use you will make of a garden, then plan it in the way that will best further this use. Naturalistic design, which seeks to produce an effect as nearly like nature as possible, does not often serve a functional purpose.

* * *

Discoveries made by research workers have taken much of the hard labor out of home gardening. Many traditional practices have been outmoded.

* * *

Sunshine in homes and gardens is as valuable as on the beach; and a surprising amount of it is available to those who seek it. Avoid overplanting with tall plants that shade the home grounds unduly, especially in planting near the house.

* * *

Cut the tips only of New Zealand spinach. They are quickly replaced, and have a tenderness that will tempt the children. Cut Swiss chard leaves before they exceed 10 inches in length. Better to throw them away if not needed; and encourage the plant to replace them.

* * *

If snap beans are picked before the seeds show in the pod they will keep bearing. New varieties live longer, and yield more because they are resistant to disease.

Summer Garden Mulches Save Work And Moisture

It will pay to experiment with garden mulches. There is nothing new about the idea, but the trend of expert opinion among agricultural experimenters favors the use of mulches to replace cultivation.

Anything which covers garden soil between plants is a mulch. Experiments have been made with nearly everything including concrete walks laid between garden rows.

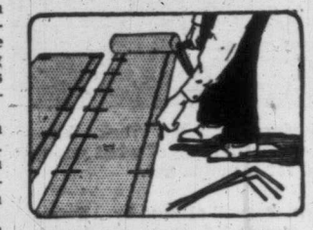
One of the most practical and satisfactory mulch materials is lawn clippings. Three to six inches may be piled on the soil around tomato plants, and they will keep the ground moist, while allowing rain to enter. Such a mulch lowers instead of raising the temperature. In applying it a layer two inches thick should be worked into the surface of the soil, and additional material piled on later.

A covering of newspapers laid between the rows will keep weeds down. It can be held down with stones, or wire staples. The layer should be several sheets thick, and laid down wet. Rain will find its way into the soil in the spaces around the plants where the mulch does not fit closely. When hot, dry weather prevails the old papers can be removed and a new layer laid down after the ground has been thoroughly soaked.

Mulches of fresh organic material, such as manure, straw, alfalfa, peat moss, and others, stabilize the granular structure of soils and prevent surface compaction.

In testing various mulching materials, it was found that when seeds of Chewing's fescue grass were sown between plant rows, it produced the same effect as a good manure mulch, at considerably less expense.

Light aluminum foil, such as kitchens use, has proved good for mulching commercial vegetable crops. The bright surface reflects the sun and keeps down the temperature of the soil beneath.



Paper laid between garden rows and held down by wire staples, keeps down weeds, and keeps in water.

Waste lumber is used by some gardeners to shade the ground between rows. By laying down boards when planting the garden, and walking on them rather than the soil, the ground is kept loose, and by shifting the boards between rows, weeds can be killed without hoeing.

* * *

Very hot weather slows down plant growth, much as cold weather does. Keep this in mind when calculating the time it will take late sown vegetables to mature.

* * *

Plant diseases are nearly always encouraged by dampness and darkness. Keep out of the garden on damp, cloudy days, when your clothing may brush against plants and help spread disease.

* * *

Annual flowers will keep blooming if the flowers are not allowed to got to seed. Many varieties slow down, but can be revived by cutting back the top growth severely.

Victor Mature Thanks Wife For Transformation

By BEN COOK

VICTOR MATURE

The handsome actor insists, however, that he is strictly an ex-man-about-Hollywood. He gives credit for the change to the former Dorothy Berry, whom he married three and a half years ago.

Mature's transformation from night club habitue and central figure in gossip-column tidbits has been a gradual one. He says it is complete, though.

"I'm in bed every night before 10, and up at 6 every morning," he said. "The only time I'm up late is on Saturday night, and if the wife tries to get me out to a dinner party in the middle of the week she's due for an argument."

NOW HAS STEPSON

When Mature married he also acquired a stepson, Michael, now eight years old.

"He calls me daddy now and I believe him," said Vic. "He's a regular kid. Sharp as a razor and an all-around good boy. He goes to public school and doesn't get the pampering they do in private schools. Michael isn't going to grow up to be a sissy or a snob."

Family man or not, Mature says he still loves making movies. He never squawks about his parts.

The 41st annual exhibition of the Island Arts and Crafts Society will be held at the Douglas room in September. How grand that may sound. Few the people viewing the pictures will know, however, that this may be the last exhibition.

Two or three members will recall that in 1910 the first exhibition was held in the Alexandra Club, the first ladies' club to be formed in Canada and now the R.C.M. police building on Courtney Street. Others will remember Miss Josephine Crease who kept various catalogues and programs from the beginning and who passed them on to the artist, Miss Maude Lettice, a great friend.

Among them is a letter from Miss May Mason to Miss Crease.

EMILY CARR AN EXHIBITOR

At the second annual exhibition in October, 1911, Miss M. Emily Carr, since then recognized as a great Canadian, showed "The Cathedral" (priced at $50) and three other pictures. R. R. Mackay Fripp, F.S.A., writes that this work was possessed of great dignity and goes on to say real impressionism is the result of studied elimination, careless methods, the avoidance of difficulty and neglect of drawing and close study will never bear satisfactory fruit.

In 1912 the following words will sound familiar to modern ears. Hon. Dr. Young, minister of education at that time, used them in declaring this year's exhibition open. When the provincial government resolves upon providing further additions to the new blocks that are now being added to the Parliament Buildings a museum will be provided for, and a portion of that museum will be devoted to the purposes of an art gallery, with a view to fostering the artistic spirit in the city and in the province."

At this time Dr. E. Hasell was president. His report shows an active art club which had Tuesday evening and Saturday afternoon sketching meetings, Outdoor meetings took place during the summer and lectures were held.

SCHOOL OF HANDICRAFT

In 1913, a year later, the Island Arts and Crafts opened a school of handicraft and design at 719 Courtney Street. Subjects taught were wood carving, bookbinding, practical design, clay modelling, jewelery, grammar of design and metal work. There were six on the teaching staff. Terms were $6 a quarter for one lesson a week.

TO PRESERVE NATIVE ART

John Kyle, A.R.C.A., made a comment at this time that may well be noted by teachers of design. He regretted the attempt of occidental civilization to graft on the natives, who had such a beautiful art of their own, the European style of design which meant nothing to them and through which they could express no native idea.

In 1916, from October 24 to 28, 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., the yearly exhibition was held. One half the proceeds was to aid the British Sailors Relief Fund. A painting of daffodils by Princess Patricia was lent by Mrs. Barnard. A new exhibitor was A. M. D. Fairbairn. In the craft-room Miss Milly Carr shows three handsome mats in Indian totem design. There were numerous architectural designs, the most interesting being of the proposed new cathedral, by J. C. M. Keith. The Exquimalt Chapter, I.O.D.E., and the Navy League, took charge of teas. The sum of $590 was handed over to the Red Cross.

The Island Arts and Crafts Club consisted of 150 members at that time and Dr. Hasell, madical superintendent of the Royal Jubilee Hospital was still president.

In 1919 a Provincial Arts and Crafts Institute was formed with which the Arts and Crafts Society affiliated. A large room was secured in the Provincial Library building for housing a permanent art exhibit. Introduction of real art training into the public school of British Columbia and the possibility of forming a B.C. Academy of Arts were discussed at meetings in the Provincial Library.

CRYSTAL GARDEN GALLERY

Now we come to possibly the first Art Gallery in Victoria. No date is on this catalogue but in 1925 the Island Arts and Crafts Society were running it with a Second Loan Exhibition of fine and applied art, including a collection from the National Gallery at Ottawa. It was called Crystal Garden Art Gallery and the 16th annual exhibition was held there. A collection of pottery by Miss M. C. Carr was exhibited among 46 items of crafts and 72 pictures.

And so on this happy note we must close an art diary of the years—a bouquet of picturesque memories. The Island Arts and Crafts Society still functions as a forgotten elderly grandmother among the art circles of Victoria and its few members still have enjoyable Monday afternoon sketch meetings. So even if this possible September exhibition is the last, the sunset will be full of glowing memories of a glorious day.

The work of compiling the material and sorting it out was undertaken by Miss B. C. Newton, assisted by Mrs. Lilian Sweeney. A copy of the notes may be found in the Provincial Archivies.

Fish Crowding Human Talent For Spotlight

Exhibitionism is a major characteristic of the human race. If it were not for this fact the development of radio and television might have been retarded by 500 years. For there would be few entertainers of the screwball type; no Maj. Bowes, Orson Welles or Charlie McCarthy. And certainly no Walter Winchells!

But exhibitionism is not a property of mankind alone. It is dominant in the animal and bird kingdom as well. In fact, so far as we know, the only creatures who don't manifest this trait are fish. We are assured that fish leap out of the water, not for the purpose of showing off their pretty scales or their athletic prowess, but for much more practical and ulterior reasons.

Yet there is a move on foot in Victoria to provide the finny ones with a chance to proclaim their curves and kaleidascope of color. An aquarium has been announced as a possible project for one of the civic-minded service clubs.

SECRETS?

Actually, we believe the idea is for the people to look at the fish, rather than the fish at the people. Also, that something of mysterious importance will be learned—by the people from the fish! Possibly secrets long hidden from ordinary eyes in the deeps of the oceans and lakes; such as the eating habits (of use to fishermen), the love-life (for long-distance swimmers), or the art of suspended animation.

Joking aside, it is quite likely that an aquarium is something that no self-respecting city should be without. But many people will have little use for the project—and even less for the alternative one of a children's zoo—while this, the capital of British Columbia, has so long lacked adequate, modern auditorium accommodation.

Civic projects are usually valued according to the benefit accrued to the greatest proportion of the population. Are many people really going to care whether they ever visit an aquarium or not? Tourists are not likely to be stimulated into spending more time in a city simply because they can exchange stare for stare with a fish, no matter how gorgeous or scientifically absorbing!

Do people really want a civic auditorium? Or better still, a civic centre that would house several recreational and cultural pursuits. We believe they do and that a poll would reveal a majority opinion in favor of this over any other two "attraction" projects!

Reviewing The Records

For devotees of the sophisticated approach to the piano, Victor is issuing this week its fourth album by Andre Previn, the young, German-born pianist. Included are "Spring Will Be a Little Late This Year," "I've Got My Eye On You," "You Took Advantage of Me," "Skylark," "Dearly Beloved," and "Love Is Just Around the Corner."

* * *

If you're tired of listening to folk music and what is passing these days for folk music, you'll welcome, with a nostalgic twinge, an album of "Gypsy Airs," with Harry Horlick and his orchestra. "Two Guitars" and "Dark Eyes" are most familiar of the eight sides in the M-G-M release, but the balance of the melodies are pleasantly dane and nto too reminiscent of Ye Old Tea Shoppe.

* * *

As a lure to the dance customers, Capitol Records has just brought out a "Sweet and Lovely" album of six of Jan Garber's most requested dance numbers. You'll hear "Sweet and Lovely," "Please," "Just One More Chance," "Say It Isn't So," "Thanks," and "Honey."

* * *

CONCERT MUSIC

RCA Victor is splurging with the Boston Symphony in its "Pops" orchestra disguise and with sound commercial sense because nothing quite attains the currency of a really good melody sonorously and lovingly played.

Five singles include some stirring melodies not hackneyed by too much playing, such as obscure overtures by Weber ("Abu Hassan"), by Litolff ("Robespierre") and Reznicek ("Donna Diana"). Three 10-inch LPs collect (1) Sousa Marches, (2) the first six of Brahms' Hungarian Dances, and (3) Strauss' "Blue Danube," "Vienna Woods" and "Treasure" waltzes.

For the music played, these performances are just about the best conceivable and are conveyed by bright, sharply defined recording. Not only a wonderful orchestra, but a conductor, in Arthur Fiedler, who applies as much conscientious and animating musicianship to "Pops" fare as he would to a Beethoven symphony.

NEW SINGLES

The battle of the sexes goes for another round in a clever ditty called "Woman Is a Five Letter Word," recorded by Harry Ranch and his orchestra. (M-G-M) ... Billy Eckstine's disciples are sure to be enthusiastic over the Master's interpretation of "Everything I Have Is Yours." M-G-M ... "Laura" seems to have definitely reached the status of an American classic. Stan Kenton and his orchestra give it the straight treatment, but good.

'Skip' King, hero to thousands of Scouts

Busiest days for the commissioner are when the scouts go to Barnard Camp at Sooke. He supervises them as they take turns in cooking, rustling wood. When they are not swimming and hiking there are instruction periods. Discipline is strict but the lads like it. The 60-year-old chief is the most energetic and untiring of the campers.

Scouts erected this boom and to show how solid it is they are putting some pressure to bear.

Future scouts are cubs like these 450 attending a rally during Boy Scout Week. Freeman King gave the lads a talk on scout ideals and with understanding of what youngsters like he also engaged Frank Merryfield for a magic act.

This view of Freeman King in the uniform he usually wears is one that is familiar to nearly every Victorian who has seen the tall, wiry scout hero around town.

Tall, Wiry Idol Of Youth, Martinet, Yet Friend As He Teaches Good Citizenship

By HARRY YOUNG

To thousands of young men on Vancouver Island, he is known as "Skip." He's a tall, wiry, almost skinny looking chap, with the deep tan of a man of the open air. Nine times out of ten you will find him in short trousers, with a knife stuck in his stocking top, and other implements beloved of youth dangling at his belt. To a leather thong around his neck is attached two small pieces of wood, known to the fraternity as unwell beaus.

The fellow is Freeman King. He holds the position of executive commissioner of the Boy Scout movement in the Greater Victoria district. It is a professional appointment.

But to Freeman King, scouting is not a business, it is a hobby. He would be working at scouting even if it wasn't his job. In fact, it was because he was the keenest scout ever to shine this island that in 1942 they made him a professional with the title Field Commissioner for the district.

When a fellow's heart's in his work, hours don't count. Often King is on the job at 7 in the morning and isn't finished even when "Taps" is sounded long after sunset.

During the summer you will find "Skip" out at Camp Barnard, the scout camp seven miles from Sooke where, beside the glittering waters of Young Lake, are the camp grounds where every summer hundreds of Victoria Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs learn to live under canvas and make do for themselves.

Freeman King presides over this domain. When there's a major decision to be taken, "Skip" makes it. When there is any slackness showing around the camp sites, Freeman King is there to give a blow-up talk, and to see that everything is put shipshape immediately.

At times, this Scout boss can be tough. He gives his dressing-down sergeant-major style, and the recipients wince as the rebuke is administered.

The tough treatment however goes down well. There isn't a boy in the scout movement who doesn't think Skip is a swell chap. And there isn't a real scout about whom "Skip" doesn't reciprocate.

MUST FEEL YOUNG

Ask King how it is that a man of about 60, that's his age, looks and acts like a man in his mid-forties, and he will just smile. "You cannot allow yourself to feel or look old on this job."

This job, as King puts it, involves at present acting as cook for the service scouts who help him run Camp Barnard during the summer. It also involves him in long overnight hikes with scouts who are seeking experience in their quest for badges, as well as all the business attached to keeping the boys in order.

King is really at his best when you get him puzzled. He pulls off his wide-brimmed scout hat and scratches like mad through his long, slightly curled hair.

The act is part of a technique. When he has rubbed long enough, he is able to supply the answer to the difficulty. "Skip" scratches and you can sure bet your life something is cooking.

ALWAYS ORIGINAL

There's no question about the woods, the stream or mountainside that King cannot answer. To walk through the woods with "Skip" is to learn something new at every step.

Under King the local boy scouts are taught to build bridges, to construct lifts across canyons, and at the moment he has them working hard so that every boy scout in the district will be a valuable citizen should anything like air raid disaster strike.

When you see King and his boys constructing a crazy-looking contraption with a rope to take men and luggage over a deep ravine, you ask King "Are you not afraid to risk boys' lives on a thing like that?"

"Skip" replies. "When we do any jobs like that I am always the first man to go aloft. I reckon that if I come through all right, it is all right for the lads."

STICKS TO B.P.

It is this determination to do everything the boys do, that makes "Skip" the hero at whose shrine every boy scout worships.

There's one point on which King does not always see eye to eye with local scouting leaders. King demands that the boy scout procedure should be maintained on the Baden Powell pattern. He thinks that the basic precepts of the first Chief Scout cannot be bettered.

That is not surprising for King himself is one of the original scouts. He became interested as soon as Baden Powell founded the scout movement in 1908.

Freeman King, who was born at Petworth in Sussex, England, was a boy of 16 when he first heard of Baden Powell's great idea. With some local lads he formed the 1st West Sussex troop, and peruaded a minister—the Rev. Arthur Newman—to be scoutmaster.

"We knew practically nothing about it at the time," explained King. "There were no handbooks on scouting then, and very few people were even taking aden Powell seriously. However, we learnt slowly what the master was trying to teach us, and before I left for Canada in 1910 I was a firm believer in the future of the movement."

When he left England's shores as a boy of 19, Freeman King had risen to the rank of corporal (now a second) in the Boy Scout movement. He made for Saskatchewan where in the time he wasn't chasing cattle over the range he was helping to form boy scout troops in the prairie province.

In 1911 when he joined the North West Mounted Police, he had more opportunity to pursue his scouting ambitions. He formed scout troops in Saskatoon, Redbury, Prince Albert and Raddison.

"Everywhere I went I started a troop," he said.

Then came the First World War. Freeman King joined up right away and in the fall of 1914 left for France with the First Canadian Division. He remained overseas until 1919.

Back in Saskatchewan, Freeman King took up farming until 1925 when he came to the coast and found a job with the Sidney Lumber Company in their sawmill at Sidney. It was then that Vancouver Island felt for the first time the compelling urge of Scout-fiend Freeman King.

First move was to form a wolf cub pack in Sidney. This was quickly followed by a scout troop—of which he became scoutmaster—and then he formed a Rover crew.

Although higher scouting ranks have removed him from his old Sidney connections for many years, Freeman King still keeps in touch with 90 per cent of his old Sidney scouts. They are among the hundreds who send him cards every Christmas.

PROUD OF DEAN PARK

It was only natural that a fellow who knew so much about forests and open air should gravitate towards the forestry service. In 1937 Skip joined the B.C. Forestry Department, and his flair for handling young people gave him a niche in the Youth For Training plan.

Freeman King was also in charge of many of the relief labor gangs about this time. There were lots of tough lads among them, but King never experienced any difficulties handling them.

The mile and a half road up to this park, together with the miles of trails, the lovely camp site, the dammed-up lake and the artistic round house, were all planned by King and constructed by relief labor.

FOUGHT BIG FIRE

King was working a trail crew at the Oyster River when the great forest fire of 1938 broke out north of Upper Campbell Lake on June 12.

King and his men were rushed to the spot, and King's organizing ability was called upon to supervise the running of a camp for the 1,000 men who at one time or other were working on the blaze.

King set up his camp at Elk Falls, where he maintained a 24-hour shift. Men came in at all hours of the day or night, and always King saw to it that they had plenty of hot food to eat.

But the camp itself came in the danger line of the fire. Flames were rising all round when King decided it was necessary to make a quick evacuation. Equipment and stores were hastily buried, and the camp crew rushed out in front of the flames to set up a new camp on the Campbell River, near the Campbelltown road bridge.

"It was a terrible time," said King. "I saw 20-foot tops of trees being thrown like massive torches through the air for 500 yards, setting up new blazes far faster than any firefighters could move.

MIRACLE SAVED COURTENAY

"I watched Constitution Hill with its massive timber stand going up in flames in less than an hour," he continued. "The fire brigades in Courtenay were pouring water on the roofs in what looked a vain effort to save the city, when the miracle happened. The wind changed. Nothing else could have saved Courtenay."

For 10 days King went without taking off his clothes and with only an odd blink of sleep. He collapsed on the job and woke up in Lourdes Hospital in Campbell River. Dr. Hall said he must have a complete rest and no excitement.

When King woke up the next day and saw where he was, he smuggled into his clothes and crept out of the hospital to get back to the job. Dr. Hall sent an ambulance to the camp to fetch him back, but Freeman, back on the job refused to listen.

"I could not lay off when the firefighters were having such a tough time," he said. "I watched them coming in with tongues and lips swollen by the smoke, heat and fumes."

When war broke out in 1939, Skip was 48. He went along to the recruiting office and was bitterly disappointed when told that the army had no use for a guy "that old."

However, the army did not relent. King tried to show them by taking on heavy construction jobs, such as building hangars for the R.C.A.F.

Eventually, however, Freeman King got his chance. He joined the Pacific Coast Militia Rangers and rose to be their second in command.

Then in the spring of 1943 came the great joy of Freeman King's life. He became a full time professional scout field commissioner for the Greater Victoria District.

"They started paying me for my hobby," he said.

Anyway the Scouts have had full value out of 'Skip.' He built them their wonderful Camp Barnard at Sooke and his enthusiasm has spread like an epidemic among all the youngsters who have joined the movement.

In 1943 and 1948 he visited Ottawa on scout staff courses and then in 1949 as quartermaster of the B.C.-Yukon contingent to the first Canadian Scout Jamboree at Ottawa.

I asked Freeman King what he would do if he ever lost his job as Executive Scout Commissioner.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1951

on the TIMES

By ART STOTT

A man once told me that the way to be an executive was to make decisions. He said it didn't matter much what decisions you made, but you had to be decisive—no shilly-shallying. You looked at a problem, sized it up, or went through the motions of sizing it up, and then you said to anybody around you: "This is it. This is the way we'll do it." There wasn't to be any "maybe" about the procedure. It had to be definite. The guy who sounded most definite was the executive.

"That way," the man told me, "you inspire confidence. People get the idea that you know what you're doing. All they need is direction. You give it to them in that firm-chinned way and they accept it. Sure, you'll make mistakes, but be emphatic about them. Once you're an executive, it's easy enough to single out someone responsible for your mistakes and tell him where he went wrong. That preserves your batting average. But be decisive."

Stott

I TRIED IT FOR a while. The night after he'd given me the advice, I had a conference in our kitchen. "Tomorrow," I told the person who'd been the boss in our house, "we'll have bacon and eggs for breakfast." I said it decisively and it looked as if I was getting away with the determined approach. There wasn't any quibbling or any objection. And the next day we had coffee and toast for breakfast.

So I figured I'd better practice up on executiving, try it out on the lower echelons first. I called another conference with the small fry and said: "Tomorrow, you'll clip the edges of the lawn." The instruction was firm enough and there was no rebellion. The next evening I caught a chill in my kidneys trimming the grass in the sundown breeze.

IT CAME TO ME that a man probably has to look like an executive to put the act across. I tried wearing a hat. It isn't a Homburg, which is probably standard equipment for executives. Mine is a broad-brimmed rain hat I bought while under the influence of the western stories I read. That brought a reaction. Folk still snicker when I put it on.

So I set out to study other people who seem to be the executive type. There's one on the bus I catch coming back from lunch. He's a young man, wears a Homburg and a dark suit usually, and walks purposefully. He knows what he's doing and he's decisive. He doesn't run for the bus. He's there on time. When he enters it, he strides to the back seat. He's about the only one on our bus who can stride to the back seat. The rest of us just sway and grope our way down.

It's a small thing, but his demeanour catches the eye. You notice him and think to yourself "There's a young man who's going somewhere." Naturally enough you copy the technique.

JUST TO BE a little more impressive, I stood a few yards away from the regular bus stop. Nothing like having the driver pull up for you specially. Only Red was driving. He didn't stop. He slowed down and I had to jog along until we reached the right place before he'd take me aboard. It was a poor show, knocked all the dignity out of the performance—most unexecutive. Then he started in a hurry and my stride to the back seat wound up in a side dance that almost ended in a woman's lap.

Somehow I just don't seem to be the executive type. They gave me the wrong training. When I was young the folks used to say that if you wanted a job done, the best technique was to do it yourself.

I went back to the man who gave me the executive advice in the first place and told him my troubles. He just looked at me coldly and snorted at the maxim I'd learned as a kid.

"Look," he said, "if you do things yourself, who're you going to blame when they go wrong? That's no way to be an executive."

NO, IT WASN'T Ogden Nash who wrote "The Purple Cow." It was Gelett Burgess. Sorry, Ogden. Or sorry, Gelett, as the case may be.

If it hadn't been for a thoughtful proof-reader, I'd have credited Phil Strong with the authorship of Irving Stone's "Lust for Life" the other day, too.

Ever since I learned of the who-wrote-Shakespeare controversy I've been pulling boners like that. With no scholarship to back me up, I still like to think Shakespeare wrote Shakespeare. He's been hammed enough without introducing any more procine elements into his work.

But when a guy starts skipping his reference books the way they've been skipped here recently, the kindest thing that can happen to him is to be sent on vacation. That's for me, starting today.

Roll up your garden hoses and get out your slickers, neighbors. Come August 28th' I'll tell you how the rains came.

Prepare By-Election Campaign

The provincial riding of Esquimalt will see much of these two well-known British Columbia figures during the next two months. Premier Byron "Boss" Johnson is expected to take an active part in the campaign to elect Victoria's Mayor Percy George to the legislative seat left vacant by the death of Cmdr. Charles Beard. By-election is expected to be called for early October.

RUMORED OPENING ERROR

Line Up For Horsemeat; May Start More Stores

Customers were waiting to buy horsemeat at Victoria's new Trojan Market at 610 Fisgard Street, this morning, but there were no sales. A rumor of the store opening turned out to be erroneous.

"I got up especially early this morning, just to get a good steak," said Mrs. Grace Holben, 737 Vancouver Street, formerly of Surrey, Eng.

"We had it in England during the war," she said, "and it was fine, much better than some of the beef we've been buying lately. There were stores selling horsemeat supposed to be for animal food only. We queued up for hours to get some, then ate it ourselves. It was grand."

"The people in France and Belgium know the best ways to cook horsemeat," Mrs. Holben said. "They have delicious recipes."

S. F. Showers, owner of the new market, arrived on the scene at 9 a.m. to supervise installation of fixtures. He said the Trojan Market would not open until next Saturday.

"We want everything to be exactly right before we open," Mr. Showers said. "Customers will be able to see the entire cutting and serving process in completely sanitary surroundings."

Asked if the top price of 63 cents for horsemeat might be increased later, Mr. Showers said:

"We will hold prices at that figure, no matter how high beef prices may go. We'll depend on volume sales to take care of any possible increased costs."

MAY OPEN OTHERS

"If we get public support," said Mr. Showers, we'll open two or three more stores in other parts of the city."

Two tons of horsemeat is in storage in the city already, the store owner said, and there are 10 tons more on the way here.

Meanwhile, Reg Williams, president of the Retail Butchers' Association, said that four Victoria butcher shops have gone out of business permanently because of high meat costs and buyers' resistance.

"They were all small shops, carrying a general line of meats," said Mr. Williams.

Canadian Press reports from Vancouver said 15 butcher shops have closed in the mainland city for similar reasons.

Ontario Rumored Royal Escort Ship; May Go East

The Esquimalt-based cruiser Ontario, only cruiser in commission in the Royal Canadian Navy, will likely be sent to the east coast at the end of the month for a three-month tour of duty in connection with the arrival in Canada of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh.

Official plans for the cruise are being kept secret and regular naval sources have declined to comment. It is known, however, certain high-ranking naval officers have been told of the plans.

Ontario will likely go out to sea to meet the Empress of France, bearing the Royal couple, and escort them up the St. Lawrence to Quebec. The ship may also serve as a home for the distinguished guests while visiting cities in the maritimes.

STOTT PREDICTED RAIN

Moisture Fell As Columnist Left On Annual Holiday Trip

During the futile visit of William Johnston, the self-styled Regina "rain-maker," trying to bring rain to parched Saanich, Mr. Stott wrote on July 18:

"Since I quit wearing tight shoes and my feet grew happy again, I haven't been able to tell when it will rain — not to the minute or the hour, that is. But if it doesn't come within the next two weeks, you can expect a downpour during the first three weeks in August. That's when I go on holidays."

When Mr. Stott started his holidays at noon today, it was raining.

Firefighting Cost Boosted

The cost of fighting forest fires in the province so far this year has been $241,132 more than the cost at this time last year.

B.C. Forest Service reported today the bill is $320,428. In the same period last year it was $79,296.

There haven't been a great many more fires this year, either. The total to date is 1,105 while in the corresponding period of 1950 it was 946.

Some of this year's fires, though, have been harder to bring under control because of location and weather.

Guns Boom Out Salute To Queen

FIVE CRASHES IN 25-HOUR PERIOD

One Injured, $5,000 Damage; Colwood Corner Locale Of Worst Accident

Only one person was injured, but an estimated $5,000 damage was done to cars involved in five crashes in Victoria and district area between 3 yesterday morning and 4.10 this morning, police of the area reported.

In fairly good condition in H.M.C.S. Naden hospital is AB. Frederick Taylor, H.M.C.S. Naden.

He was found badly hurt beside a late model stolen car that crashed into a telephone pole at Colwood corners early yesterday morning. Body of the car was demolished in the crash. R.C.M.P. highway patrol are checking the possibility of another person being in the car at the time. The car, owned by Wilson Motors, was stolen from a garage at Sidney, where it was up for sale, police said.

FAILS ON TURN

At 4.10 this morning a car, driven by George Robertson, 269 E 32nd Ave., Vancouver—local address, 1252 Galdstone Avenue—failed to make a turn at Tyee Road and Johnson Street, knocked out 35 feet of railing and ran down an embankment to wind up against some trees. The driver was not hurt but the car was heavily damaged.

At 11 last night cars driven by Delmar K. Guest, 3875 Cedar Hill Road, and Robert S. Bigelow, 285 Ontario Street, met in violent collision on Cadboro Bay Road, near Eastdown Road. Drivers were unhurt, but damage was estimated at $1,500.

A car driven by Eric L. Coulson, 506 Pendray Street, collided with the rear of a parked car in charge of Louis P. Impey, 1748 Davie Street, at 11.55 last night on Skinner Street, near Craigflower Road, city police reported.

The impact sent the Impey car forward to collide with a telephone pole. The drivers were unhurt.

CAR DEMOLISHED

In a Friday morning Saanich accident on Interurban Road, a truck driven by James D. McMurchie, 2404 Cook Street, and an old-model car driven by Edward G. Travers, 456 Chester Street, met in collision. The car, worth about $300, was demolished and about $200 damage was done to the truck, police said. All five persons in the car were unhurt.

Ev Slater's Clout Saves Individuals

Victoria Individuals scored three runs in the bottom of the last inning last night to salvage a 5-5 tie with Moose Ramblers in the third game of the best-of-five finals for senior women's city softball title.

Moose went into the game leading the series two games to none. Jocelyn Richmond and Ruth Oster, star hurlers for Moose and Viduals hooked up in a tight pitching duel that broke open in the seventh inning. The Individuals led 2-1 going into the seventh but Moose chased in four runs in the top of the inning.

The game was called at the end of the seventh due to darkness. Next game in the series will be played Monday night at lower Central Park, starting at 6.30.

Black Dog Unloads Three Tons Of 15-Pound Tuna

First sizeable landing of tuna was made here today, but apparently fishermen are in for a lean year in their annual search for the flavorsome "chicken of the sea."

"It's slim pickin's out there," said Bill Tellier as his 58-schooner Black Dog discharged 442 fleshy tuna at Fishermen's Co-operative Association dock. They averaged almost 15 pounds each, for a total landing of more than three tons.

He reported many tuna boats are heading back to port because of the poor luck. However, with price likely to be $400 a ton or better (it was $300 to $350 last year), some boats may stay at sea hoping for an improvement.

Tellier, with brother Ed Tellier and Bob Benson as crewmen, fished under sail most of the time from the picturesque Black Dog, built three years ago at Canoe Cove near Sidney. They went out as far as 125 miles southwest of the mouth of the Columbia River.

Tuna—most streamlined fish in the sea—have been late this year. First landings usually are made about July 20 to 25.

More than a week ago, Fred Homer brought 11 fish in his Zorina; earlier this week, Harvey Ryall's Salar landed about 150 fish, and last night Jack Ryall brought in about 260 tuna in his Frances R.

Police Release Man Suspected Of Jail Break

A suspected fugitive from justice in the United States has been released from the city police jail after establishing his Canadian citizenship by producing a birth certificate, R.C.M.P. headquarters reported today.

Arrested last Tuesday at Campbell River by R.C.M.P., the 45-year-old man was suspected of being a convict who escaped from the state penitentiary in Nevada last April with another man.

The convict was reported to have been serving a sentence of from one year to seven and one-half years for attempted burglary.

Since neither attempted burglary nor jail-breaking are covered by the extradition agreement, a suspect cannot be deported to the United States unless he is an American citizen, police explained. Burglary and robbery are extradictable offences.

Pensioners Aided By Surplus Food

Pensioners and others on $40 per month incomes have termed the fruit and vegetables distributed at the surplus food stall in the public market a "blessing," Mrs. Barbara Green said today.

Originator of the free food stall idea, she was on hand with volunteers from market opening time to receive and distribute surplus foods to the city's needy in the third Saturday operation of the stall this morning.

"Victorians realize the need and donors have brought in excellent produce," she said.

Blacktop Surface On Craigflower Road Delayed

Deep clay fills, necessary to eliminate short, steep inclines, will be allowed to settle. In the meantime, the road will be gravel-surfaced.

Esquimalt municipal officials decided against the road job when the cost was estimated at $35,000, but the provincial government declared the route an arterial road and took over the project.

Traffic congestion on the present Island Highway route along twisting Gorge Road will be greatly eased when the new route along Craigflower is ready. Other portions of the new alternate highway outlet have already been brought up to standard.

Self Reliance Said Big Need

Many of today's world problems would not exist if all peoples possessed the fine characteristics of British Columbia pioneers, according to Willard Ireland, provincial archivist.

Addressing the Lions Club here Mr. Ireland referred to such qualities as courage, enterprise, willingness to do a full day's work, an innate sense of justice and a fine sense of co-operation.

Today most people don't have any idea of what constitutes a full day's work, he declared.

"People think building a home today is a tough job," said the speaker as he outlined the difficulties involved in building Helmcken House when hewn timbers were brought from the far end of the island and lime was brought from Langford.

Nootka To Depart

H.M.C.S. Nootka, came out of drydock here today, after undergoing repairs to her propellers, and loaded up with supplies in preparation for sailing tonight to her east coast base of Halifax.

Nootka has been here since Tuesday, after returning from six months' service with United Nations naval forces in Korea.

Summer Shoe Wearers Get Money's Worth

Wearers of white shoes were getting their money's worth out of them this summer as Victoria area entered the 52nd day of a near-record dry spell today.

Sales of white footwear in women's shoe stores here have been unusually high, and the necessary white shoe polish has been crossing the counters at a record rate, store managers said.

Sun glasses and sunburn ointments have been in unusually heavy demand.

"Sales in all summer lines have been brisk," one downtown merchant said. Commenting on slow sales of rain-shedding items, he mentioned some slip-on shoe protectors for use in wet weather.

"They've been put away somewhere," he said. "We haven't heard anything about them since April."

Young Englishwoman Here On Extended Visit

Miss Anna Christine Mottram, stepdaughter of Dr. S. Janowsky, and daughter of Mrs. Janowsky, 1025 Pentrelew Place, makes friends with the Janowsky pet budgie, following her arrival from England the beginning of this week. Miss Mottram is the only granddaughter of the late Sir Thomas and Lady Mottram of Bessacar, Yorkshire. Her father is Maj. T. W. Mottram, M.C., Nant-Y-Gaer Hall, North Wrexham, North Wales, and her maternal grandparents, with whom she has resided until recently, are F. W. Seeley, Esq., and Mrs. A. B. Seeley, J.P. of Sutton-in-Ashfield, Nottinghamshire.

Mrs. Aldous and her house guest, Mrs. Breedon.

Lifelong Friends Renew Happy Memories

Ever since they were seven years old and friends together at private school in Readings, Berks., Eng., Mrs. F. G. Aldous, Tudor Road, and Mrs. Daisy C. Breedon, Tujunga, Calif., have been friends and when separated have kept up a steady correspondence.

Mrs. Breedon, an interesting and vivacious woman, very much like her hostess, arrived in the city Tuesday and plans to stay till the end of next week and then go on to Duncan to visit other friends.

As girls in their first years of school they were inseparable even to spending their vacations together.

"We had some wonderful times," Mrs. Breedon recalls, "but I'm afraid if I mentioned them it would date us too much."

The years brought many changes, of course, but the two kept in touch and have been reunited several times.

"Such tongue-wagging and gales of laughter you've never heard as when we start reminiscing about the 'olden days'," says Mrs. Aldous with a chuckle.

Mrs. Breedon taught school in Victoria at one time, then edited her husband's newspaper in Tujunga, Calif., for eight years.

"That was wonderful," she said. "It was hard, mind you, but I certainly loved newspaper work."

She went on to say, "I'm back at teaching now, though, and after special training I am now instructing classes for slow-learning children. It is extremely gratifying to see your efforts taking effect on these children and to help them find a place in the world."

Mrs. Aldous, who has mastered the art of making stuffed animals from everything imaginable material, is passing on her knowledge to Mrs. Beerdon, who, in turn will interest her classes in this handcraft.

"I've often wished I could make these toys for they are ideal for children to work with. About the best will be the golly-wogs made out of socks," she said.

Even now as new chapters in their lives open up, the two women are always ready to help each other. "It's always like that with real friends," they tell you.

GOLDEN RULES FOR MARRIAGE

BRISTOL, Eng. (CP)—At a reunion of more than 200 couples at whose weddings he had officiated within recent years, Rev. B. Vaughan Parry of St. Anne's Church here, offered the following golden rules for enduring marriage:

For the husband — Give your wife the morning cup of tea. Take over housekeeping for a week. Learn to cook and help wash up. Assist with the children. And give the wife a reasonable allowance of pocket money.

For the wife—Keep feminine, husbands love it. But remember good looks are not adequate compensation for poor cooking. It's fatal to discuss your husband's faults with the woman next door. Don't expect a perfect husband, he would be a perfect nuisance if he existed.

Fourteen wives and 11 children make up the Shamrock's home group of fans. Among them are, left to right, Mrs. "Red" McMillan, Mrs. Archie Browning, Mrs. Norm Coates, Mrs. Duff McCaghey, Mrs. Deans Blackstock with Russell, Mrs. Alex Macdonald, Mrs. Ralph Baker, Mrs. Bill Andrews, Mrs. Darrell Popham and Gail, Mrs. Len Scott, Mrs. Andy Ovcharick and Denise, and Mrs. Norm Baker. Mrs. Tommy Druce and Mrs. Arnie Ferguson, who is holidaying at Parksville with her husband were absent when the picture was taken.

Lacrosse Has It's Distaff Side . . .

Win, lose or draw, members of the Shamrocks, Victoria's indoor lacrosse team, are assured of one group of fans who always think they are right up on top in this popular summer sport.

Wives of the Shamrocks follow the games consistently . . . they are excited fans at the home games and when the team is away, they follow the evening's play on the radio.

Nutritious meals, well cooked and served with a smile, are important in any sports training schedule and Mrs. Bill Andrews, Mrs. Len Scott, Mrs. Deans Blackstock, Mrs. Norm Coates and Mrs. Alex Macdonald are experts (as are all the wives) at keeping coach Arnold Ferguson happy about "his boys" in this respect.

Summer Beauty Reflected In Up-Island Wedding

Fresh white summer daisy halos and bouquets chosen by bridal attendants in full-skirted gowns of fluffy organdy posed over shimmering ivory satin created a beautiful contrast when Christine Kennedy, a lovely bride in a gown of shimmering blue brocaded satin, repeated nuptial vows with Earle Norman Hartley in St. Mark's Anglican Church at Qualicum Beach this afternoon at 3.30.

Canon N. S. Noel united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Kennedy, Hilliers, B.C., and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hartley, 1067 St. David Street, Victoria.

For the occasion the church was decorated with baskets of white heather intermingled with white chrysanthemums and gypsophila. Traditional wedding music was played by Frank Schroeder and Miss Margaret Clark sang "My Prayer" while the bridal pair signed the register.

A rhinestone and aquamarine necklace with matching clips worn at each temple on the net and satin braided halo that held her wedding veil further enriched the beauty of the bride's gown with its rich embossed design.

Attending the bride was her twin sister, Mrs. Stanley Gamble, matron of honor, and bridesmaids Miss June Marshall and Miss Joy Williamson. With their gowns they wore mitts of yellow and green net to match their tiny headdress veils.

Little flower girl Darlene Gamble was gowned identically to that of the bride, and wore a daisy chain halo in her hair. She carried a nosegay of daisies.

were Reay Johns, Gilbert and

The lounge at Qualicum Beach Hotel was bright with summer blooms for the reception, where the bride's table was set with three-tier cake iced in blue, and lighted white candles in silver candelabra. George Walker proposed the toast.

For a honeymoon motor trip to Oregon the bride changed into a chic navy gabardine tailleur, white pique hat with red trim and red suede shoes with companion satchel. She pinned a corsage bouquet of white gardenias to the lapel of her white, soft wool topcoat.

Among Victorians who attended the up-island wedding were Mr. and Mrs. George Hartley, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ford, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Trevett, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schroeder Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schroeder Jr. From Sooke were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thornber, Mr. and Mrs. S. Giles and Mr. and Mrs. James Arden. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thornber came from Vancouver.

Biscuits For 'Buster' 'The Best,' Says Mabel

By PENNY SAVER

"Can you beat that, Penny," said friend Mabel, when I met her in town this morning. "Beat what?" says I. "I just bought our pooch a pound of dog biscuits . . . imported, no less . . . and they cost me 50 cents a pound."

"Gadfrey!" says I, "what are they, chocolate-coated or something, with diamond-studded centres?"

"Not likely," she said, "but they're an extra special liver dipped and dry meat variety. Very well liked among the hounds, they tell me."

"Mercy! At that price," says I, "it's a wonder you and Sam aren't serving them at tea."

"Well," says she, "I'd check your food if you're thinking of dropping over for a snack within the next few weeks."

"By the way, I've got something to tell you about a dog," she said. "Real human interest stuff. Know your friend, Peter, who has that nice little summer home at Langford?"

I said I most certainly did.

"Well," says she, "this fellow Pete is responsible for our dog still eating 50-cents-a-pound dog biscuits."

"No kidding," says I. "The McCoy," says she.

"A couple of weeks ago we missed Buster coming home for supper. A most unusual occurrence He didn't return that night, nor three days later. We started worrying. We put ads in the paper, phoned our friends, but still no pooch. Just as we were about to write him off the food list we hear this pooch of ours is laid up in the hospital. Happy?

"In two minutes flat we zoomed to town, found that our Buster is well and happy and able to go home. We could hardly live with Junior, he was so excited.

"Well, Pen, this Peter, we are told by the vet, had found the dog in a swamp near the lake. Seems he was walking beside railroad tracks and saw red spots dotted all round one area. He and his friend followed the vivid tracks and found our dog lying half done-in.

"There he was, half of two paws and tail missing, a big gash on the head and welts on his body. He looked worse than a successful shopper at a 9 a.m. sale.

"Pete sends his friend back to house to phone the vet and also to get a canvas to make a stretcher. All this time he was waiting for the return of friend he kept talking to Buster, and threw his coat over the dog to kepe him warm. Imagine!

"Evidently our Buster had been hit by a train a day or so before and no one had heard his cries.

"To bring this story to a close. One day, after Buster arrived home, still unable to get around, loaded down with bandages and three kinds of casts, your friend Peter happens to drop over to inquire about him. Then it happened!

"Up until that time the dog hadn't seen his helpmate but remembered his voice as soon as he heard it.

"You'd have thought that hound was going mad. He dragged himself to the doorway and yapped and hollered for all he was worth. There was no calming him until Peter had stroked and hung onto him for about half an hour or so. This is gratitude to the 'inth degree!"

"Any dog of mine who loves people that much gets himself as many 50-cents-a-pound biscuits as he can eat!

"Good morrow, Penny, dear!"

Scottish Knitting Patterns To Be On Display At C.N.E.

Traditional Scottish knitting patterns, passed from generation to generation, will be shown in a novel display of home-knitted garment being sent from Inverness, Scotland, to the C.N.E.

Sending the display is Miss Catherine Gillies of Inverness, who has spent many years tracking down local traditional designs so she might help keep them alive by using them in modern-styled garments.

In the district of Gairloch, over 100 years ago, says Miss Gillies, knitters were famous for "Gairloch stockings." Few men nowadays wear long stockings and attractive patterns might easily have been lost to posterity. Miss Gillies adapted three of them to make "weskits," or waistcoats, as we know them, and is sending samples of all three patterns to the C.N.E.

In Dumfries-shire, there is the village of Sanquhar, where also, about 100 years ago, there was a flourishing trade in hand-knit gloves made in four local patterns, "Duke," "Rose," "Prince of Wales" and "Midge and Fly." The wearer's initials were knitted into the cuff. These patterns Miss Gillies has also revived and is using them in modern-style gloves, also coming to the Ex.

Other interesting items in her display will include a cerise-colored evening shawl, using still another old traditional pattern, a pair of diced hose, hand-knitted some 80 years ago by the mother of the late Mackintosh of Moy, several diced waistcoats and some Norwegian designs done by a Shetland knitter in the Fair Isle method.

Simultaneously with the showing of these early Scottish patterns in Canada, Miss Gillies will have similar displays at the "Living Traditions" Exhibition in Edinburgh, part of the Festival of Britain.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Give Your Friends A Lift By Being Pleasant Company

People are the most interesting things in the world! It is fun, and it is instructive, to watch people. You can learn a lot from them and at the same time, be highly entertained. It is like seeing little skits in a never ending play.

I was having luncheon alone the other day in a large restaurant and I could not help overhearing the beginning of a conversation between two women at the next table.

One woman arrived early and selected a seat. When the other woman came in she asked if they could take another table because there was a draft on her and she took cold easily. The first one instead of reacting in a simple considerate way, began to argue that there was no draft there, that there would probably be more draft if they moved. (There was a draft. I felt it myself but only hurricanes affect me.)

They moved, and as they did so, the first woman's face was "all torn up" and unpleasant in expression. I thought "I'll bet that will be a delightful luncheon!"

I imagine that if it had been possible to overhear the conversation the thread of a petulant attitude would have run through it. I do not know why people nip at life and at others in such dreary ways. I do not know why they always have to be right or have their way or boss everyone around. Of course, not all folks are like that, thank heavens, but there are too many of them and all of us slip too often in such matters.

Are your actions as lovely as the outward loveliness of actress Janice Rule?

I still think monuments should be built to those who give life a lift, who warm it for others with their quick humor or consideration, who make a casual meeting something which lifts daily routine.

Certainly the woman who possesses such qualities is lovelier more loved and more youthful to look at, loveller to be with,

New Electronic Discovery Helps Deafness

LONDON, England—A miraculous new electronic device for the hard of hearing has been recently perfected by a leading London electronic scientist.

"This revolutionary development in electronic research," he says, "for the first time enables the deaf to hear the faintest sounds, such as the rustle of a leaf, or the loudest and harshest sounds without any discomfort; and, moreover without having to alter or touch the control."

He explained further that this new Magic Ear, by automatically adjusting sound intensities to the individual hearing of the wearer, produces a complete range of natural hearing with the greatest clarity.

"The name of Contrast Control," he said, "has been given to this wonderful new quality and it is going to bring untold relief and enjoyment to those deaf persons who cannot, with their present hearing aid, tolerate loud, high-pitched sounds without extreme discomfort."

He added that the present type of hearing aid, which relies on simple amplification of sound, is now completely out of date and that manufacturers in future will have to incorporate this new and expensive feature in their Aids.

Hard of hearing readers of this news item may obtain a copy of the free and interesting booklet, "Contrast Control, a New Chapter for the Deaf," on request; this will be sent in a plain wrapper. Address, Box 712 Times. ***

TRADING BECOMES BRISK

Stock Markets Cheat The Bears

By HARRY YOUNG, Times Business Editor

The most important feature of the stock exchanges this week was not so much the continued advance of prices, but the increased volume of trade. On several occasions during the week over 2,000,000 shares were traded on Toronto and New York.

The resumption of active trading was due largely to interest in specialized lines. On Wall Street utilities were again strong, and gave further point to the belief expressed in this colmun some time ago that this was a section of the market which might appreciate in view of its neglect over the bull period of the past two years. Steels, oils and at times the chemicals were marked up sharply, not as groups but individually as good dividend and earnings news came through.

Young

Toronto was more hesitant in its advance than New York, although in the end its week's jump was largely similar. The hot spot of the Ontario exchange, however, was in the base metal section. On Wednesday after the United States had dropped its tariff on the import of lead from Canada, the base metals came away with a rush, and Consolidated Smelters at one time during the day put on as much as $6. This was hardly maintained, but it gave the rest of the mining market a trend which it seemed happy enough to follow.

Nearer home, activity was also noted on the Vancouver Exchange. Western Uranium, which has made a tungsten discovery of some importance on its Rocher de Boule property, soared from its close of last week by a full dollar—$2.80 to $3.80.

Quatsino Copper Co.'s annual report giving details of the iron ore exploration on its Vancouver Island property sent the shares of that concern jumping from 30 to 40 cents in a similar period, while the oil market was dominated by Britalta, the B.C. incorporated independent which recently made spectacular gas finds in the Many Islands Lake area.

Britalta shares, which earlier in the year were marketing around $1, rose from $3.55 to $4.15 during the week.

* * *

The action of the stock exchange has been puzzling to those who regard the present North American economy to be highly charged with dynamite. Lower earnings for the second quarter of the year by United Steel Corporation, the biggest steel organization in the world, was seized upon as a sample of what might be expected from other big corporations.

Yet the market met this rebuff, just as it has met most other rebuffs of the last year. It rode the punch and continued to move ahead.

Those who prophesy that sooner or later there must be a recession of a considerable intensity are basing their arguments historically. Yet they are dealing with a situation that has never happened before in North American industry, namely, that of defense spending at a wartime rate during a period of peace (sic).

ALL RECORDS BROKEN

World oil production in May reached an all time record of almost 12,000,000 barrels a day. The U.S. produced just a little over half the total. Texas is producing almost half the U.S. oil. August allowable is 2,953,452 barrels a day.

Middle East May production was 2,200,000 barrels daily with Iran (now closed down) supplying 717,000 barrels a day.

Canada's May production, an all time record, reached 141,000 barrels a day compared with 80,000 in April and almost 160,000 allowable for August.

Govt. Blamed For Inflation

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadian economist Stuart Armour says the real villain of inflation is government spending.

Mr. Armour, economic adviser to the president of the Steel Company of Canada, said in an article in the national quarterly Public Affairs that Canada would never, in the situation now prevailing, be able to escape high prices until "we abandon our policy of deliberate inflation and drastically cut the level of ordinary government expenditures.

"Ottawa planners in 1945 guessed wrong as to what would happen in the post-war years. Their collective wrong guesses constitute perhasp the greatest and gravest of the wrong guesses of our history."

Mr. Armour, Canada's wartime gasoline controller, said Ottawa set an inflationary economy under way by planning for depression.

Inflation, he said, was sparked by the release of controls which had suppressed price increases during wartime, and was fed by the failure of physical production to keep up with rising prices.

CONTROLS NO GOOD

Physical volume of production rose only two per cent annually while wages were climbing 11 per cent. He said Canada's productive capacity after the war was turned to the production of more leisure for workers, rather than more goods.

The economist declared price controls now would favor the Communists more than the Canadian consumer. Controls would create shortages of consumer goods, increase inflation, and bring economic chaos and public unrest. These conditions all would aid the Communists in achieving their aim of "destroying the individual by destroying the society that individual initiative has built."

He said price controls were not the answer. "To socialists, whether in Moscow, London, Regina or elsewhere . . . every means that increases the dictatorial power of the state must be very welcome."

WASH SECRET

LONDON (CP)—In a recent test here 50 girl factory workers made nylon stockings last twice as long as usual. The secret was to wash and handle the stockings gently and to make knees and feet smooth and clean before putting stockings on.

Directors Advise Against Exchange

MONTREAL (CP) — National Breweries Ltd., today advised shareholders that estimated net profit, after taxes, for the six months ended June 30, 1951, amounted to $427,875 compared with $329,200 for the same period of 1950.

The advice was contained in a letter to shareholders. On July 3 company directors had advised shareholders of an offer by Canadian Breweries Ltd., to acquire National Breweries shares.

At that time directors advised shareholders to delay deposit of their shares pending developments. In their letter released today the directors said that insofar as the common stock offer from Canadian Breweries Limited was concerned, they felt an exchange of one share of Canadian Breweries for one share of National "does not adequately reflect the related potential worth of the common shares of National Breweries Ltd."

UTILITIES AND BASE METAL MOVE FORWARD

There was a general movement upward on all the stock exchanges this week. On Toronto base metals jumped 5.37 points and for the second week in succession the 15 utilities on Wall Street posted a new high for a period of two years.

Many Alberta Wells Ready For Testing

CALGARY — Husky Phillips Pine Lake, D-2 discovery, 30 miles west of Big Valley, is broken down about 40 feet in green shale at 7,243 feet, 243 feet past the top of D-2. Additional depth of 150 feet is a reasonable guess at D-3 expectancy. Drilling is expected to resume in about three days.

Bailey Olds, 30 miles southwest of Pine Lake, D-2 wet gas discovery is preparing to test after a two-week fishing job. Well will perforate above 8,124 and run a series of tests backward up the hole.

Canadian Superior Jackson, 10 miles southeast of Bailey Olds, is drilling at 3,663 feet. The Superior Robertson well, 30 miles north and 12 miles west of Calgary wet gas discovery in the Madison, is running further tests. The Superior Borth oil discovery, 40 miles east and 12 miles north of Stettler, is running pump tests.

GASSER COMPLETED

New British Dominion and Mid-Continent, after completing the Etzikon gasser a dozen miles northeast of the Pawkowki field, are moving still another 14 miles northeast to Bullhead location.

Union Old Man River, 10 miles west of the Bow Island gas field, is preparing to spud.

Scurry Anchor No. 10 at Redwater rates a potential of eight to ten barrels an hour from D-3. The Anchor Scurry Normandville well, 25 miles southeast of the Normandville well, is drilling at 6,792 feet. Normandville hit 37.5 gravity Devonian oil at 6,740, got 25 feet of pay.

Trans-Empire Big Valley has been abandoned at 6,020 feet. The company will commence its Wainwright Fabian well, about seven miles west of Wainwright Oil, next week.

Officials at Naco Petroleum believe their Blood Indian well to be a discovery of possibly 100 barrels a day or better. The Madison was acidized first with 1,000 gallons, later with 2,500 gallons. The well flowed by heads after both treatments. During further swabbing operations, it kept blowing the swab out of the hole over the crown block. Believing themselves to be too far up in the gas, the well was ordered killed with water.

WAS FIRST EXPORTER

On the gas export route to Montana, Jet Oils announces that it has acquired a 20,000-acre reservation and will soon drill a well on holdings in townships one and two, ranges 11 and 12. The land contains the site of the old Rogers Imperial gasser first well ever to export gas out of Canada. It sold gas across the border for many years before exhausting one of three gas-bearing zones.

Jet announces purchase of controlling interest in Alberta Sulphur Ltd. which holds 100,000 acres adjoining holdings of Sunbeam Sulphur Ltd., and now controlled by Dominion Tar & Chemical. Jet plans development. Dominion Tar plans four wells on Sunbeam property.

McDougall Segur Texaco No. 1 has spudded on 5,000-acre Texaco farmout, 25 miles southeast of Redwater.

Cal Standard Nisku No. 7-19, important wildcat eight miles due east of the mid section of Leduc is coring for D-2 at 5,002 feet. The well is virgin territory.

Dome Naco Drumheller D-2 discovery near the Naco sand pool has found D-3 waterlogged and is plugging back from 5,600 to the 30-foot pay zone at 5,420 feet. The well and 3,300 acres of checkerboard leases are shared by Dome, Naco and Western Leaseholds.

Sohio and Standard of Ohio have started two new Saskatchewan wildcats raising current total to five. One, 90 miles southwest of Moose Jaw, is about 150 miles from the Montana strike and edges the north rim of the Williston basin. The other is 40 miles northwest of Regina.

Cal Standard has started its Wawanesa wildcat about 55 miles southwest of its Virden oil shows in the Madison. Somewhat deeper in the basin this well may catch a thicker section.

The Amerada discovery toward the northern rim of the Williston Basin of North Dakota has now tested a shallower zone 10,490-10,530 feet getting flows of over 300 barrels a day of 39.4 gravity oil. Previous tests of 11,630-11,660 gave flows of over 300 barrels daily but a gas-oil ratio which would prohibit sound production without use of gas. The shallower zone has a gas-oil ratio of less 1,000 cubic feet per barrel.

Shell's discovery on the west side of the basin in Montana at 7,185-7,253 in the Madison is said to be capable of 100 barrels an hour, 38 gravity oil.

Construction Controls Hit U.S. Building

Half Of Blueprints Possibly Shelved

WASHINGTON (UP)—Mobilization officials estimated today that tough new government controls over large-scale construction will force builders to shelve half their blueprints during the coming months.

The drastic curtailment of non-defense construction, designed to conserve critical supplies of steel and copper, will strike hardest at such projects as hotels, offices and large apartments. It will not affect low and medium-priced homes, stores and other structures consuming small amounts of critical materials.

As the first step in setting up the new controls over construction—the most rigid thus far to be slapped on the building industry—the National Production Authority (NAP) Friday imposed a temporary ban on any new big construction projects, including factories, hospitals and office and public buildings.

DOUBLE THE SUPPLY

After October 1, when the freeze ends, builders will have to get government approval for all big projects using more than a set amount of construction metals. They will be able to get the materials only through government allocation.

Estimates that half the applications for government approval would be screened out were based on the fact that the demand for structural steel is almost double the supply. Copper supplies also were viewed as critical.

The order permits builders to go ahead with construction during the freeze period if the foundation already has been poured.

The freeze also does not apply to projects which, in general, do not require more than two tons of carbon steel and 200 pounds of copper. Officials said this should permit construction of a $15,000 to $18,000 home without government approval.

B.C.'s Economic Picture Suffers Hard Blow From Longest Dry Spell

VANCOUVER (CP)—Drought's dusty hand is pinching British Columbia's economy.

Some 25,000 men, mostly loggers, are out of work. The forests were ordered closed July 12 in southwestern B.C. because of the fire hazard.

The drought so far has cost an estimated $7,000,000 — $4,000,000 in loggers' wages, $2,000,000 by lumber operators and $1,000,000 by farmers.

There has been no rain for 52 days and the weatherman said today none is in sight. It is the longest dry spell on record on the west coast.

Stocks of logs have run low for the 500 mills in the district and lumbermen forecast a serious log famine for this winter. Some major mills have already closed, a few are on short time and nearly all the small ones have shut down.

The $50,000,000 order for some 600,000,000 board feet for shipment to Britain before July, 1952, calls for loading of about 50,000,000 feet a month out of B.C. ports. These orders alone take up 20 per cent of the sawmill output.

LABOR PROBLEM

Labor supply is another worry for the operators. Many loggers have taken new jobs, particularly on the Aluminum Company of Canada's development in northern B.C.

Department store managers here indirectly attribute a 14 per cent drop in business in the first week of July, compared with the same week last year, to loggers' lost wages.

The full shock, however, will not be felt until winter. Shortages haves been predicted for all kinds of lumber, including fuel, and for dairy products.

Butter production is down about 50 per cent and farmers are dipping into next winter's feed supplies because pastures have been burned brown.

For ice cream and soft drink vendors, bathing suit manufacturers and tavern operators, however, it is the best season ever.

Loggers Lead In City Final

Surprise winners in the semi-final round, Forest Products last night took a one-game lead in the finals of the Senior B men's Softball League by downing Esquimalt 6-5.

The teams banged out a total of 27 hits and made seven errors in a wide open game. The winning run was scored in the top of the ninth as George Coldwell, Forest Products catcher, walked, stole second and scored on Dave Patterson's double.

Second game of the best-of-five final will be played tomorrow at upper Central starting at 2.

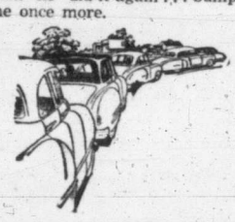
Souped . . . Drooped . . . & Pooped

We had driven too far that day . . . I was all in . . & so were the gals. I had a kink in my neck & a pain in my seat & my sun glasses were pressing down on my nose like a ton of lead & every bug in California was splattered all over the windshield. Then we hit this "Freeway" as it's called, a 6-lane highway where every driver in Cal. seemed to converge & be there at the same time. I didn't have a second to glance at the speedometer but I knew I was doing 60, & thot I was holdin' my own, when a demon from Detroit who was hanging on my tail, crept up closer and gave me a bump. "THAT DOES IT," I sed, "we're gonna get outa this rat race & into the first Auto Court we see. "Gee," sed Trudie, "I wish we'd never left that place with the pool & the white telephones" . . . then "he" did it again . . . bumped me once more.



"W-e-l-l, . . . of ALL things," sed the G.F., turning about to give him the "stare," but it did no good, we were bumper-to-bumper. "There's an Auto Court ahead," screamed our eldest, but how you gonna get over, we're in the wrong lane?" Don't worry," I sed, "I'll get over . . . just watch this." I gave 'er more throttle, I spread out the fenders, I retracted the wheels . . . we flew right over the others, & slid to a slow landing directly in front of the "office," of "El Rancho." (Note—There are 4,579 Auto Courts on Highways 99 & 101 called "El Rancho"). "You look like you've HAD IT," sed old "El" himself . . . "sure I can fix you up . . . just one cabin left with 2 double beds . . . got $7.50?" "Quite a crowd out there," I remarked. "Yep," sed "El," 93,000 cars pass here every 24 hrs., half going one way, half t'other . . . more cars out there than any other place in the world. Lemme see them fenders . . . never seen anything like that afore . . . how U got 'em fixed so they spread out like that . . . first time in 15 years ever a plane landed in here." Then he bellowed, "Hey . . . Ma . . . show these folks to No. 7 under the walnut tree." Ma came out, tucking her blouse into her skirt . . . "Howdy folks—from Canada, eh? . . . I got a nephew up in Sasa-katune . . . bin meanin' to go visitin' him someday. She unlocked No. 7 & shuffled off. I collapsed on what was once a bed, while Trudie fell on a davenport & went right thru, but our eldest & the G.F. just stood on the busted congoleum, & both sed at the same time, "we WON'T stay in this place." "I don't blame you," I mumbled & passed out. I don't know how long I slept, but I suddenly awoke with my right foot jammed against the brake . . . the bed I mean . . . & then I sat upright, as a train went thru the room, & the wig-wag signal outside kept up its fearful racket. I couldn't see Trudie, but the gals we're standing beside the jumping 40-year-old Frig, trying to hold it down. They threw our unopened grips in the back of the car. Trudie & I stumbled in the back seat, our eldest Kleenexed the bugs off the windshield, the G.F. backed out from under the walnut tree, secured the levers holding the wings & the undercarriage, opened the throttle, & away we rolled & far into the nite.

Movie Moguls Look To Win Back 'Unfaithful' Fans

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The movie bigshots have dreamed up a big campaign to win back the unfaithful to the movie screens.

They're shelling out $700,000 for a big hoopla called "Movietime, U.S.A." It will be a country-wide celebration to call attention to the notion that a good movie is worth your money.

The movie men are dead serious about this campaign, and I wish them luck. I hope they don't resort to such past slogans as "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" or "Movies Are Better Than Ever." Good movies will lure the public back, not slogans.

Yes, I was busy, too, during the last weeks, although the result was perhas not so productive. The time was spent beside the clear waters of Balboa Island, Calif. I managed to rediscover two neglected mediums, the radio and the book. The latter seems in better shape than the former.

Summer programming on the air is a curious rash of murder, dope addiction and sundry other crimes. On one Wednesday evening I could hear such assorted slueths as Pete Kelly, Johnny Dollar, Rev Saunders, The Falcon, The Fat Man, Rocky Jordan and Mr. District Attorney.

They uncovered an average of 2.7 corpses per program. At the end of the evening, I thought I detected a trickle of blood flowing out of the loudspeaker.

Murk and murder, in the Hitchcock manner. If you like a fast-paced, edge-of-the-seat thriller, here's a distinguished example from the man who can wrap more elegance round violence than any other living director.

"Strangers On a Train" comes up with a startling novelty based on the idea "You do my murder for me: I'll do yours." The improbability of any two sane men putting this idea into practice is overcome by the simple device of making one of them not so sane. And as the paranoic, devil-witted Bruce Antony, Robert Walker acts with a sinister polish that is both heart-chilling and fascinating at the same time. Into the murderer's fixed stare he manages to put a curious, cocky cunning, and over and over again he achieves a macabre emphasis by standing perfectly still and doing nothing whatever but look. The result is that he acts circles round Farley Granger, who, as Guy Haines, a likeable amateur tennis champ, has little else to do but look outraged, a thing he can manage with considerable charm. Ruth Roman also suffers a measure of eclipse, but is so lovely to watch and nice to hear that you won't care.

The old Hitchcock brilliance is at its best with the minor parts. And though some of these parts come trickily near to caricature (sample: Barabara, the tennis champ's girl friend's busybody sister) there are some superb bits of observation, and also some clever visual triumphs. Two of them—(1) the murderer's fixed face in the middle of a gallery of tennis fans, all of whose faces are swinging rhythmically to and fro as they watch the play; (2) a cigarette lighter (needed to exonerate the tennis champ) revealed at the crucial moment by the fingers of the murderer's hand opening in death to disclose it.

There is a breath-taking climax which sees both the accused and the murderer fighting a frenzied, last-ditch fight on a merry-go-round that "goes wild" and spins its dizzy way with a screaming load of children and adults to merciless disaster. One shot—of a carved merry-go-round animal plunging wildly up and down within an inch of the murderer's head, is a grotesque little film in itself.

In short, it's grim; it's harrowing, and at times it's horrible. But it's wonderful Hitchcock.

IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

By TOMMIE WALTERS

SUNDAY BY YOUR RADIO . . . A new series of early Sunday morning piano recitals, takes the air at 6.45 a.m. over KIRO. Featured artist on the opening program, "Keyboard Concerts," will be the American pianist-composer Grace Castagnetta with a selection of classical works and some of her own improvisations on familiar themes. In future weeks the soloists will be George Bolet, recently from Cuba; Claudette Sorel, Fulbright scholarship holder; Nina del Rosario, Philippine pianist; John Ranck, Vera Brodsky, William Masselos and Perry O'Neil.

* * *

"Invitation to Learning," at 8.35, features the letters of Mme. de Sevigne, 17th century French chronicle, over KIRO.

* * *

The dean of English music, Ralph Vaughan-Williams, shares the honors with another grand old man, John Sebastian Bach, on James Fassett's "Your Invitation to Music" at 10 on KIRO (12 noon on CBR). This concert will come to a close with the playing of this composer's "Symphony No. 6 in E Minor" by the New York Philharmonic under Leopold Stokowski.

A radio presentation of the treason trial of William Joyce, notorious from 1939-45 as "Lord Haw Haw," will be broadcast on Dominion Network over CJOR at 2.30 p.m. The Old Bailey trial of Joyce, whose sympathies had been with the Nazis since before the war, aroused considerable interest, not only among laymen but among the legal profession, because the case turned on whether Joyce had ever been a British subject. The decision in the case altered the common law of England and it was carried, on appeal, to the House of Lords.

A suite for strings by Albert Williams, who in 1903 founded the Buenos Aires Conservatory (now numbering 92 branches in Argentina), will be presented in the "Summer Concert" program at 5.30 on CBR with Alexander Brott conducting.

"I came to Tehauntepec . . . and was bewitched by the Isthmus." Thus Arnold Belkin of Mexico City explains the strange fascination which came over him when he visited this small corner of Mexico with its face to the Pacific and its back to the Gulf of Mexico. Actually Tehauntepec means "The Women"—the Tehauna—for this land is a woman's land. Once it was man's, and the byword was gold. But the gold vanished and the men went away. Belkin's script, dealing with his visit to the province, will be performed as a dramalogue on "Dividend" at 11 p.m. over CBR.

BETWEEN TIMES there's the "Saint" at 1 p.m. on KOMO. Walter Brennan's "You Can't Take It With You" at 3 on KOMO. "Memo From Mollie" at 3.30 on KIRO or "Roll Back the Years" with Ed Manning at same hour, on CBR featuring popular recordings from 20 to 50 years ago. The new program "Fiesta" at 4.30 on KIRO with stars, Ora San Juan and Bob Graham providing authentic south-of-the-border music. "Mario Lanza" with Giselle, at 5 on both KIRO and CJVI. Rise Stevens, glamorous mezzo-soprano, on "NBC Summer Symphony with Vladimir Bakaleinikoff conducting at 5.30 on KOMO. Broadway is My Beat" at 6 on KIRO. "Contented Hour" at 6.30 on KIRO. "The Whistler" at 7.30 on KIRO. "Standard Hour" with Richard Tucker at the "Met" at 8.30 on KOMO.

* * *

TONIGHT . . . "Saturday Magazine," featuring the Glengarry Highland Games, held at Maxville, Ontario, earlier in the day, at 5 p.m. on CBR. "Saturday at the Shamrock" at 7 on CJVI-CJOR. Interviews with the Canadian girls who are at Avon Tyrell on their tour of the United Kingdom as guests of Garfield Weston at 8, on CBR. "Magnificent Montague" at 8.30 on KOMO. Baseball at 9.05 on CKDA.

Reforestation Being Slowed By Drought

The B.C. Forest Service has received a set-back in its reforestation plans.

Officials said today the crop of Douglas Fir cones from which the seeds of the tree are thrashed for planting is only about one-half the size expected earlier.

There were indications in the spring that a $15,000 crop would be reaped. The signs now are that the harvest will be worth about $8,000.

The hot weather, too, may delay collection of the cones. Plans are to start the harvest in about a week, but the closure on the woods must be lifted before crews of high school junior rangers can start the work.

Stiff Chop, Wind Force 15 Craft Out Of Regatta

Stars: Ona, Dave Turnbull; Aquilla, Gordie Nickells.

Snipe class yachts will start their race today from Cadboro Bay at 2.30 p.m. Other classes are racing in Esquimalt harbor and approaches this afternoon.

Marg Todd Four Strokes Off Pace In Closed Golf

LAVAL-SUR-LE-LAC, Que. (CP)—The tough assignment of overtaking an elusive par and the pace-setting score of a doughty veteran was left to the field today in the final round of the Canadian Ladies' Closed golf championship.

So far, neither task has been accomplished.

In the same two rounds, Mrs. A. B. Darling of Montreal Whitlock has been the leader with consistent play. In Thursday's opening round she shot a 78 to go one stroke in the lead. Yesterday, in weather fit for almost anything but golf, she took 81.

Closest to her at 161 and rated the best chance to catch up, were Mrs. Peter Patch, a clubmate from Whitlock, and Marlene Stewart.

The west coast made its strongest bid when Mrs. J. H. Todd of Victoria came through yesterday with an 81 to give her a 36-hole total of 163, four strokes behind the leader.

Another British Columbia golfer, hefty Babs Davies from Vancouver Marine Drive, also shot an 81. This gave her a two-round score og 164.

Old Dentures Lead To Murder Arrest

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters)—A dead man's set of false teeth kept by police for 12 years today led to the arrest of Richard Henry Bugg, 37, on a charge of murder.

The victim was identified only 10 days ago as Murray Herbert Ling, 27, of Tasmania, through a dentist's record. Examination showed he died from blows on the head from an axe.

The mystery of the victim's identity remained unsolved until police recently made a new attempt to trace the dentist who made the teeth. It was successful.

Police said in evidence today that Bugg had admitted the murdered man was Ling and had explained how he was killed.

U.S. Cuppers Take 2-0 Lead

RYE, N.Y. (UP)—Herb Flam, of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Vic Seixas, of Philadelphia, can clinch the American zone semi-finals for the U.S. Davis Cup tennis team today by beating Mexico's Vega brothers, Armando and Rolando, in doubles.

The U.S. raced off to a 2-0 lead by winning the opening two singles matches yesterday under leaden skies at the Westchester Country Club. Art Larsen, of San Leandro, Calif., the U.S. national singles champion, defeated Armando Vega, 7-5, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5, and Flam easily whipped Mexican champion Mario Llamos, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

Bring Unemployment

The prolonged dry spell, and the subsequent closure of all forest industries, has resulted in an unusual upward trend in the Victoria unemployment picture, C. A. Mudge, manager of the local office of the National Employment Service, said today.

Quebec Takes Team Crown

LAVAL-SUR-LE-LAC, Que. (CP)—A strong Quebec quartet Friday won the Canadian Ladies' Golf Union inter-provincial team championship with a 36-hole medal score of 664, the first time a Quebec team has won since 1947.

BRIDGE LESSON

by Oswald Jacoby

The national tournament in Washington is drawing to its close, and several hundred bridge stars are gnashing their teeth as they think of the bids they should have made and the cards they should have led. A few others are trying to look modest as they get the congratulations of their friends and rivals. Winners and losers alike, however, take home the memory of some of their unusual brilliancies. Some of those hands live in a bridge player's memory for years.

Opening lead—♣ 4

One hand that sticks in my mind, shown today, was dealt in the 1945 national championships. Sam Fry Jr. held the West cards and had to find an opening lead.

A diamond was out of the question, of course, but each of the other three suits presented a possibility. Since his own hand was worthless it was vital to lead the suit that would be best for his partner's hand.

Fry knew that his partner had a good hand, otherwise he could not have doubled three no-trump. With a good hand and strong holdings in the majors, East would have taken direct action over the opening bid of three diamonds. Hence, Fry reasoned, East must have a good hand with the strength concentrated in the minor suits.

On this reasoning Fry opened the four of clubs. This was the killing lead. The defense speedily rattled off five club tricks and eventually got the ace of diamonds too, setting the contract two tricks.

If Fry had opened a spade or a heart South would have made three no-trump. For example, South wins the opening heart lead and leads diamonds until East takes the ace on the third round. East leads another heart, and South wins and cashes his top spades. He then leads a heart to East, who must eventually return a club, allowing dummy to make the king of clubs and enough diamonds for the contract.
